

REMEMBRANCE DAY SERVICE IN SCHREIBER

The service on Remembrance Day at the Cenotaph was attended by a good crowd, the best in some years.

Jim Mikus was the bugler, L.V. Bourke, M.C. and Aurel Gauthier led the singing.

Out of 26 wreaths ordered, only one arrived, due to the mail strike and express failure. This one was laid by the president of the Branch, Jim Crook and his wife, Jean, president of the Auxiliary.

A most impressive address was given by the Rev. F.J. Meyer, Padre of the Legion.

"On this November 11, as on every November 11, we as Canadians should pause to pay silent tribute to those men who died in War and also those who were victims of aggression and inhumanity throughout the world. On our war monuments we usually find these words - Lest We Forget and in spite of this inscription too many of us have forgotten already the price paid by others that we might be free.

As Canadians we enjoy freedom and we look upon it as a God given right. And so it is, but far too many fail to recognize that with every right there is a responsibility. Those who we honour today recognized their right to freedom and the rights of others. They recognized their responsibility as free men and were ready to shoulder that responsibility so that others could be free. And in the exercise of this responsibility they were ready to pay for it with their lives.

Far too many today look on freedom as a license, a license to destroy private and public property, a license to "do as you please" without any accountability, a license to call people derogatory names. These people fail to recognize what freedom means because they fail as individuals to accept their responsibility as citizens, fail to recognize their responsibility as human beings.

If we as Canadians wish to honour the memory of those who died in war, the souls of those men whose bodies now lie buried in foreign lands, then we must be convinced they died believing in a better future for mankind. If we do this and work for that future, a lasting peace in the world, they will not have died in vain."

The Legion has proposed June 6 as another day for the laying of the wreaths, with an appropriate ceremony.

75 attended the banquet, served by the Ladies Curling Club in the Legion on November 11.
