HELPFUL IDEAS FOR SUCCESSFUL RETIREMENT

Keep List

If your credit card is lost or stolen and someone else uses it, your liability stops at $50. In fact, the law specifies that if you notify your credit card company in time, you won't even be liable for the $50. Following are some precautions if your card is ever lost or stolen:

-Keep a list of all cards, account numbers, names, addresses, and phone numbers of the companies. Keep it in a place separate from the cards.

-If your cards are lost or stolen, contact each company by phone or wire, then follow up with a letter.

-Carry your cards separate from your wallet.

-Keep only those cards you intend to use. Cancel, then cut in half, those cards you seldom use or the one that duplicate others.

-If you have a number of credit cards, it might be wise to consider credit card insurance.
