The following is a letter to Mr. Paul Mathew, Administrator, McCausland Hospital, Terrace Bay, Ontario:

Dear Mr. Mathew:

The Mobile Hearing Clinic recently returned from northern Ontario after visiting twenty-five communities from June through November. The tour was again most successful in uncovering and confirming hearing losses among both children and adults. Almost thirteen hundred hearing tests were performed and over four hundred of these also underwent and E.N.T. medical examination for identification of problems.

The clinic was greeted with enthusiasm and support as it worked its way around the province for the second year. The clinic could not operate successfully without the generous assistance and concern shown by local public health personnel. This help is most appreciated and contributes immeasurably to the success of this young programme.

May I take this opportunity to add my personal thanks to you who have helped in the communities visited.

Yours very truly,

D.P. Mitchell, M.D. Otolaryngologist-in-Chief,
The Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, Ont.

BELL CANADA 1978 TELEPHONE DIRECTORIES

With a colorful Ontario wildflower cover and a return to a larger type for customer listings, the Northwestern Ontario telephone directory is making its annual January appearance.

Mail distribution of the new directories is scheduled to start next week, January 18, according to Terry Kerr, Bell Canada manager for this area.

Ontario's official flower, the trillium, is one of nine provincial wild flowers featured on the cover of the new book. A return to the larger type size is in response to customer complaints about the smaller type used last year as an economy measure to cut down directory size.

Bell Canada expects to deliver more than 43,500 directories this year, to Bell Canada customers in Northwestern Ontario, an increase of some 3,300 over last year.

After Feb. 3, customers should call "0" and ask for the Bell Canada business office, if a directory has not been delivered or an additional book is required.
