IN MEMORIAM:

Bob:

Like a soaring bird, he wanted to be free,
And that's what he intended to be,
He captured the world within his hands,
And said Nature is where all men should stand,
Grow their own gardens, depend on themselves,
Enjoying simplicity rather than wealth.

Living and enjoying the great outdoors,
No need to bolt or lock the doors,
Taking in the beauty around,
The place where peace of mind is found,
No airs to put on for others to see,
In God's domain one can be free,
Free from pollution and winding long roads,
Nature, in value, is worth far more than gold.

God created the world and it was good,
For us to make use of the best we could,
Once in the wilderness, far away,
Is where some people can be led astray;
Following someone who claimed to love God,
But he turned out to be a fraud.
Fear took over their strong beliefs,
Filling their souls with distrust and grief.

One in the group passed away,
for he did not like being led astray.
In a case like this you ask God why,
At such a young age that he must die.
God's reasons are sometimes hard to see,
Sometimes one must fight to be free,
This is a lesson for all to see:
How much we need Society!
