

Rosspport Notes

Crime Prevention initiated in Rosspport

by ANNE TODESCO

Over thirty residents of Rosspport met at the community hall last Tuesday evening for a public meeting concerning Crime Prevention. The purpose of the meeting was to acquaint the residents with the planning and ways that people can assist, in overcoming the wave of crime in a community.

This is the first of such a programme being formed in this area. Members of the committee are Dave Iddison, Debbie MacLean, Lorraine Seppala, Linda Joiner, Louise Stefurak and Juris Zdanovskis.

Police officers attending the meeting were Cor. Don Burton and Officer Don Anderson of Schreiber's detachment of the O.P.P. Dave Iddison welcomed them to the meeting, and thanked them for offering their assistance in information regarding the formation of a "Neighbourhood Watch" group, so that they may work together to prevent crime. The officers showed slides displaying various types of locks available for windows and doors. Don Anderson pointed out the most preferable locks recommended to use for home security. He pointed out to the villagers how careless property owners can be in the locking of their premises while they are absent from the home. He suggested that people would be wise to install a peep-hole in their doors so they could examine the person wanting admission before opening the door, especially those living in apartments.

It was suggested that property owners would always:

1. Advise the police security whenever they expect to be away for any length of time.
2. Always leave a light burning, especially the 'off' and 'on' lights.

3. Tell where they are going and how they can be reached in case of an emergency.

4. When you plan to return home.

5. Leave a spare key with a neighbour.

6. Have someone cut the grass or shovel the snow from doorways.

7. Have someone to collect your papers or notices on the door or step.

8. If possible leave a car on the driveway.

An engraving tool was on display. It is used for marking valuables for identification. It proved very interesting. One could be purchased to use by the villagers. Booklets and brochures were distributed that offered useful instructions and advice. A book was given to each person that could be used to list all their furniture, clothing, jewellery and articles. It should be kept in a safe place for reference if needed.

Officer Anderson said that a "Neighbourhood Watch" is being neighbourly for neighbours. To develop this programme in a community is to do so through your local police, but the programme can only succeed if each property owner would take an active role in both the security improvement on his home and also by observation. A person could make notes on any strange or unknown persons loitering or suspicious in appearance, strange cars parked in odd places, the colour, make and the licence number. Immediately call the police and the neighbourhood watch group.

A short movie on crime was shown on how the police can apprehend the guilty person. Corporal Burton explained a policeman's duties and services. A policeman's duties included his patrolling time, hours on shift, assistance given and of course their training. The officers were very pleased with the response received from the questionnaire sent out to people. A person reporting a crime does not need to have his name made known to the public if he so desires.

Refreshments were served by the committee and Chairman Iddison voiced his appreciation to the officers for their assistance.
