Cats and mothballs

In response to one of the "No Nonsense" Tips that was printed in the November 13, 1985 edition: regarding the use of mothballs to discourage cats from jumping on furniture.

"The fumes from moth balls destroy the cat's liver cells. A cat accidentally locked in a closet (or sleeping by choice in a closet) where moth crystals or balls are used can inhale enough fumes in a few hours to destroy the liver beyond repair. Such cats with irreversible liver damage are usually put to sleep by the veterinarian rather than allowing them to endure a slow, lingering death.

If you're going to use moth crystals, make sure the garments and their crystals are in a tightly locked air-tight container, inaccessible to the cat."
