

Land in Schreiber wanted for adventure game

By Ken Lusk

Terrace Bay resident Mac Rogerson addressed Schreiber Council with the proposal of changing the location of his adventure survival game- the adult "war" game in which several teams dress in camouflage gear and use a special gun with a supply of small, spherical plastic pellets which are filled with a red dye.

At the March 10 council meeting, Rogerson said that he has had suggestions from people that the previous site at Jackfish Lake east of Terrace Bay is too far away.

Last year's adventure game was the first time Rogerson offered the sport to residents of this area.

The new spot would be at the east end of Schreiber Township.

The operation would provide space and a small building to be used in connection with the game.

Rogerson requested that council consider re-zoning the area to 'Commercial' to allow him to hold his games and to establish the operation as an allowed occupation in the zoning bylaw.

The councillors pointed out several details to Rogerson. One point made was that part of his proposed area is part of the area that Schreiber Council is seeking to get discussion until the joint meeting with Terrace Bay on April 7).

Council also made Rogerson aware that the road that leads to his proposed site is located in the Terrace Bay township.

Part of Rogerson's proposal included portable buildings, some vehicles, and signs on the highway (including warning signs that the game is in progress) to direct people to the area.

Rogerson said the game is just in fun. It can be played by people 16 years-of-age and older and it could even provide some jobs for students, he said.

"The safety of the game is stressed- I run a tight ship and I expect people to abide by the rules of the game," Rogerson told council.

Rogerson would have supervisors at the game that would include two umpires and a manager.

Councillor Tom Quinton told Rogerson he didn't want to discourage him, but said that it could take some time because of the zoning.

Councillor Bob Krause asked Rogerson if he has had any flak from people due to the nature of the game.

Rogerson responded that there were some letters to the editor last year opposing such a game. One letter accused this sport as promoting war and trying to justify the killing of humans.

Rogerson said he replied to the writer of one such letter and said that none of those accusations were true. He said it is not any more violent than Saturday morning cartoons.

Rogerson told the News on March 15 that nothing came of the letters and that if it happens again, it won't worry him.

He also said that if someone wants to play the game that he finds to be suspicious, he won't let that person participate. Rogerson will get some background on someone who he is suspicious of.

Council informed Rogerson that the matter will be presented to the Property Committee for consideration and that he will be advised in due course.

Schreiber Council briefs

Korean Veterans' Association- Schreiber Council has received a request from the Korean Veterans' Association concerning an update on the Cenotaph that would reflect the Korean conflict and those who took part.

There has been some difficulty in that it is believed by some Legion members that the Cenotaph should only be a reflection of the two World wars.

Councillor Bob Krause said that the Cenotaph should not be a Legion memorial only. It is owned by the township for the purpose of recognizing any conflict or war, he said.

Councillor Tom Quinton said at the meeting that council should ask the Legion to comment further on the subject. "Maybe there's something we don't know," he said.

Councillor Gerry Godin said it might have to do with the fact that the two World wars were conscriptive and the Korean War was voluntary.

Council decided to ask the Legion for their comments on the matter.

For safety

Now that we have added a fire truck to our volunteer fire equipment, there are a few fire safety rules to follow.

The volunteer firefighters are prepared to assist Rossporitites to come to their assistance if one is unfortunate to have a fire but let's hope it will never be.

The big truck is capable of carrying 500 gallons of water. Basically, there are do's and don'ts that one should be aware of- here are some:

1- Rags with wax or oil on them should be kept in covered metal containers or immediately disposed of.

2- It is recommended that all dry cleaning should be sent to drycleaning establishments.

3- Some insecticide sprays if near people smoking, could explode.

4- Gasoline vapors will cause a fire if near stove pilot lights or a lighted cigarette.

5- Frayed electric cords are fire hazards.

6- Dispose of ashes in a metal container.

7- Never use kerosene of gasoline to light a fire.

8- Keep furnaces and chimneys clean.

9- Handle anti-freeze solutions with care.

10- Smoking in bed is dangerous.

11- Cellars, storerooms, attics and garages should be kept free from rubbish, rags, papers and broken furniture as they could spontaneously explode, especially newspapers if damp.

12- Floors should be protected with metal, brickwood or cement under stoves.

13- Do not overload a circuit.

14- The C.S.A. seal should be on all electric wiring and appliances. That ought to be enough do's this time. Now let me see how many don'ts can be found for the other side of the coin.

1- Don't put ashes in a cardboard container.
