Sawmill

Beaulieu has high hopes for the mill reopening. If it opens again, he said, there will be a strong attraction.

There is a possibility of new jobs being created by another company with another project that is related with woodlands. Beaulieu was not at liberty to reveal what this project is.

"It is not going to stay closed. There is no other sawmill between Hearst and Thunder Bay."

Beaulieu said that about 100,000 cords of wood go into the sawmill. "It must be utilized properly," he said. "There is no choice.

"We're going to put an effort into it. The resource is not running out."

Jack Lavallet, president of Kimberly-Clark of Canada, held a news conference on March 17 and announced that due to the "drain on all the resources of our company that the sawmill is placing on us" the mill will close as of May 15.
