

Jet fighters intercept two Soviet aircraft

North Bay- United States Air Force jet fighters under the operational control of the Canadian NORAD Region intercepted two Soviet military aircraft off the East coast of Canada in the early hours of June 3, 1987, stated a news release from National Defence of Canada.

According to the North American Aerospace Defence Command (NORAD), the aircraft were tracked by U.S. Air Force Airborne E-3

AWACS (Airborne Early Warning and Control System) aircraft before entering the Canadian Air Defence Identification Zone without notification.

Two United States Air Force F-15 fighter interceptors were scrambled from Loring Air Force Base in Maine. The pilots of the interceptors intercepted and identified two Tupolev-95 Bear Fs.

The Bear F is the long-range Soviet aircraft used for anti-submarine warfare. The flight path of the Soviet aircraft brought them within 150 miles (240 kms) of St. John's, Nfld.

The incident marked the 60th time in 1987 and the second time in one week that military aircraft of the USSR have been intercepted, identified and tracked off Canada's shores by fighter interceptors under the operational control of NORAD.

In all cases these aircraft have remained over international waters.

Air Defence fighter interceptor aircraft, which stand on 24-hour alert, are ready for immediate scramble if an incoming aircraft is detected by radar and cannot be correlated with a flight plan

The fighter interceptor force carries out the NORAD task of controlling access to sovereign airspace of Canada and the United States in peacetime and would provide defence against an attack from bombers and cruise missiles in the event of hostilities.

the water were three rowers from the Leander Rowing Club of Hamilton. None were wearing floatation vests.

Hunter was filming the boating safety public service announcement for the O.F.A.H., Ontario's largest provincial conservation association, when the accident occurred at about 7 p.m.

Also participating in the rescue were Director Darrett Lee, and Neil Lawson, driver of the boat and owner of N.D. Leisure Products in Clappison Corners.

The commercial focussed on the safety measures all users of small craft should observe when planning a day on the water.

Singer-celebrity Tommy Hunter, who was starring in the commercial being filmed for the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters (O.F.A.H.), assisted with the rescue when a lightweight racing scull overturned and sank about 200 metres from shore.

The rescue effort was hampered by strong winds, heavy rain, and lightning. Pulled from
