

Camera takes five pictures

Mercedes Benz dealers in Germany, for example, where the camera was invented, use HappyCard to promote sales.

What an excellent way of showing four models of the car along with the potential buyer in the centre.

"The customer, or guest," says Haddow, "becomes the focal point of the card, while the background photo associates the customers with the products or the place he/she has visited.

The HappyCard is new, it's innovative and most importantly, it is a souvenir that people keep."

Liz McLean, one of the principals of the company, announced recently that the process of selecting entrepreneurs across Canada who want to be involved with HappyCard, is now underway.

The need to succeed with a new innovative product is the most-valued asset that men and women can bring to this business opportunity.

That, combined with a creative selling attitude that can envisage promotional opportunities, are the elements that will help the entrepreneur achieve financial success.

Watch for HappyCard throughout Canada. Its distinctive rainbow slash on the card with five pictures is catching on fast.
