

Girl Guides learning first aid

By Ken Lusk
The News

Several weeks ago the local Boy Scouts received their bronze badge for first aid, and now the Girl Guides have learned the same skills that will most likely be very necessary in the years ahead.

On Monday night, Feb. 1, the 1st Terrace Bay Guide Company and the Pathfinder Unit, were part of a demonstration that tested their skills in first aid.

Dave Allan, supervisor from the McCausland Hospital Ambulance Service, was on hand for casualty simulation that night and dressed up several guide leaders and volunteers to look like they had had some un-nerving accidents.

Volunteer Paula Sitko had a horrible gash in her arm; Sheila MoQuin, guide leader, had a thin bone protruding from her arm and Teresa Roberts, guide leader, suffered a very nasty burn to her hand.

After these victims had been dressed to 'perfection', the guides and pathfinders, in groups, took turns going through the proper procedure depending on the type of affliction.

The girls, some from Schreiber as well, have been working on their First Aid Badge and have for the last three weeks been taking a first aid course.

Monday night's exercise was the culmination of what they learned.

The Girl Guides only were working on their badge; the Pathfinders were there just to observe and learn.

During the last three weeks, the guides learned practical things like how to apply splints and bandages, as well as theory from Dave Allan.

Burn treatment

Teresa Roberts, guide leader, left, suffered a very nasty burn to her hand. The guides are shown using the knowledge they have been learning to treat Teresa's 'burn'. Dave Allan from the McCausland Hospital Ambulance Service is helping the guides learn various aspects of first aid.

A&W)," he said.

Marcella is referring to the property taxes he says the A&W won't have to pay because it's in a town-owned building.

Marcella does not think the A&W would bring more tourists to town. "You don't get tourists by offering them a hamburger," he said.
