The News went out onto the street this week to ask several residents of Terrace Bay whether they want an A&W.

Jeanette Fournier and Melanie Levesque want the A&W really bad. "I just want the french fries and good food," said Jeanette. "It will show off our town," said Melanie, right.

Birchwood's Helene Ballard- "Surely there's room for another business in town. I don't know what all the hoopla is about. I would like to see it come in. I can't walk to My Fries."

Kim Murray, manager of Robinson's in Terrace Bay, said, "Yes, it would be good business for the town. We need something to draw the tourists here. I can't think of anything bad about it."

Terry's Sight & Sound owner Terry Korzinski told the News, "Yes, why not?" Korzinski likes the idea of fast food service and a franchise. "They have good food; good and cheap."

The LeBlancs also had their three-and-a-half year old son D.J. with them at both presentations.

The News learned at the Schreiber presentation that this is the first presentation for the new year's baby organized by the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 109.

The Women's Institute used to hold this presentation until that organization folded two years ago.

The institute had held the event for at least 40 years. Note: Schreiber's Norman Boon was a new Year's baby.

Kidder requests info centre to sit and translate the transcript.

It took an hour for the officer to finally get some information.

In another instance, it was found that an individual was an armed robber who had served 32 years in prison.

Kidder said police handled this and the other situations without knowing all the facts; a potentially dangerous situation.

Police would be aware of persons like this and their history with CPIC.

Kidder informed council there would be no cost to the community to obtain CPIC; the only cost would be the manning of it.

The installation is even paid for by CPIC. All costs of CPIC, including the monthly line rental, repairs and format changes are all cost free.

Kidder said the RCMP is the landlord of CPIC, but in fact not the bosses.

Each police force in Canada has access and availability to all information in CPIC.

CPIC provides protection to the officers and safety to the community.

"Your officers and the community are better protected by having CPIC on location," Kidder said.

Council has decided to look into the possibility of getting the Canadian Police Information Centre.

know and corporate campaign.

The Canada-wide objective for the April Cancer Campaign is $36 million.

Ontario's objective is $18.4 million - over half of the national.

The theme of the conference was "You Make the Difference". Please give generously when your cancer volunteer calls on you in April and we can all make a difference.
