A Touch of Brass

By Hadley Koltun

It is hard to believe that five brass musicians can hold your attention but that is exactly what happened when the Vancouver-based brass quintet, Touch of Brass, played a variety of selections from Bach to Gershwin.

Many of the pieces were adapted for the ensemble by the resident tuba player, David Sabourin.

The five members of this ensemble include trumpeters Edward Bock and Christopher Robertson; french horn player Duncan Shaw; trombonist Robert McLeod; and tuba player David Sabourin.

Their musical style embodies an immense skill and commitment to their repertoire.

The musical selection included the Overture to "The Barber of Seville" by Rossini and the high school band staple, the Second Military Suite in F by Gustav Holst.

The author of this review could personally identify with the musicians since I had spent many a rehearsal in high school practising this piece.

Much of the second half was dominated by popular jazz favourites such as George Gershwin's Summertime and a medley of Gershwin hits.

The evening ended with a humorous British Music Hall Suite and a sparkling arrangement of Tuxedo Junction.
