All the world's a circus- continued from page 5

were stunned, first they thought Dan Quayle was actually much taller than he looked up there on that balcony and secondly they couldn't get over how much their own president looked like Mikhail Gorbachev with that red stain on his forehead. They went wild. They cheered, they danced and they sang: "Pass the tequila, Mila...your husband's like a Santa Claus to us."

Afraid that others might misinterpret his extravagant generosity, Prime Minister Mulroney flew immediately to Barbados where he forgave $182 million in loans that 11 Caribbean countries owed us. They went wild. They cheered, they danced and they sang: "Pass the bottle of rum, chum...we got a live one here who thinks he's Santa Claus."

Free trade with Mexico, I can hardly wait.

Already, Mulroney's announcement has increased employment in Canada-Simon Reisman's back in business.

Can you imagine the great leap forward both countries can make in the area of high technology by sharing manufactured goods. We'll send them our one-of-a-kind Canadian space arms and in return we'll get back stuffed donkeys, the ones wearing sunglasses with the ears sticking up through the sombrero. We'll ship them nuclear Candu reactors and they send back truckloads of black velvet paintings of bullfights in progress. We'll export Bell cellular car phones to Mexico and Mexico will send us back the equivalent tonnage in shiny turquoise jewelry and wicker shopping bags.

And the best is, Mexico won't be shipping their goods in plastic containers or wooden crates. We'll get all their stuff wrapped in pinatas.

That's right, when the shipments come in, Brian's going to let us all go down to the town square and with sticks supplied by the people who missed the morning pick-up truck, we'll be able to beat the hell out of these pinatas and the fruits of free trade will rain down upon our heads.

There's only one thing that worries me about the deal. If the United States got our fresh water in that Free Trade Agreement, do we get Mexico's water with this one?

Maybe that's part of the plan.

Drinking water from Mexico, we'll all be too occupied to protest.

You got to love the guy. Coming up with Free Trade with Mexico so soon after the success of Free Trade with the United States.

If Brian Mulroney had been in politics on May 7, 1937, the day after the Hindenberg exploded in mid-air, he'd have no doubt run on the campaign of "a hot air balloon in every home."

And the scary part is, in this country, he'd have been elected.

We would like to thank everyone that supported our Stag and Doe. Special thanks to Sue and Sean for all their hard work in organizing it. It is greatly appreciated.
