Profits from sale going back to buyer

So, I tried to make changes to the law to guarantee that the sale would at least have recovered for Canadian taxpayers the $6.8 billion they've invested in Petro-Canada. But these changes were defeated by both the Conservative and Liberal members of the committee studying the bill.

What's even more mind-boggling, the Conservatives are giving the money they raise from the sale of Petro-Canada back to the people who are buying it. It's true!

If I sold my house and donated the money back to the people who bought it, you'd call it lunacy. And you'd be right. But the $700 million raised by the sale of the first 15% of the company will be ploughed right back into the company.

And there is nothing to prevent the Conservatives from giving all of the proceeds from the sale of our company to the rich investors who buy it. That's a cruel joke from a government claiming to need more money!

Remember that the next time you shell out GST for a coffee and a newspaper.

and mooning innocent bystanders. The guy who delivers Hostess Potato Chips is taken hostage by a rink rat with a knife color commentator Carolyn Waldo shoves a hand-held microphone up Hulk Hogan's nose. Ed "The Wrench" Werenich is crushed by Zippy on the Zamboni. It's a madhouse, it's insane, it's...it's...it's Curling Night In Canada and I'm your host, Dave Hodge."

Last week, and I'm not making this up, somebody got an "eight-ender" at the Oakville Curling Club and nobody could get to sleep in that town until almost half past nine.

Let's face it folks, curling ought to be the one sport in which we actually encourage the use of anabolic steroids.

For gawdsakes, if you have even an ounce of patriotism left in you, help me get the violence out of hockey and put it in curling, a sport that desperately needs it.
