Terrace Bay girl is corresponding with a Canadian sailor in the Persian Gulf

Middleton's home is Eastern Passage, a fishing village in Nova Scotia.

"I told him about my family, Terrace Bay and things like ringette tournaments," Allyson said about her letters.

She said she sent her first letter out because she thought it would be nice to write and tell them how much we appreciate what they're doing.

She also wanted to discover what the whole experience would be like and to see if she would actually get an answer.

"He enjoys getting my letters," she said, "In his first letter he said it [her letter] put a smile on his face."

"I like getting the letters too," she added.

Middleton told her about some of his duties on the ship but he didn't talk much about the war.

"I guess it's [his letters] probably screened," she said.

Allyson also thought that he maybe didn't want to talk about it.

"It must have been pretty depressing," she explained.

In his letters, Middleton talked about Christmas on the ship, the decorations and the traditional turkey dinner.

"He said it was strange having Christmas in a Moslem country," she said.

Middleton has been with the forces in the Gulf since the ships left last August.

He told Allyson, in his most recent letter, that his ship had been at sea since January 27.

Terrace Bay MNR District Office will become an Area Office under new ministry structure

The Boreal West Region will have eight district offices: Fort Francis; Kenora; Red Lake; Sioux Lookout; Dryden; Thunder Bay; Nipigon; and Geraldton.

District offices will provide financial and administrative service for the MNR field organization as well as resource management planning and decision-making.

Area offices will focus on program delivery, customer service and public involvement. They will also manage local issues.

Area offices may be located within a district office or be situated in one or more other locations in the district.

The Terrace Bay office, presently a district office, will become an area office within the new Nipigon district.

Will Robinson, present land management supervisor for the MNR Terrace Bay District said the restructuring has been well thought out.

The new emphasis will be on providing the services required by the people rather than on programs, he explained.

The ministry is also under fiscal restraint and the restructuring will allow it to provide a better product with a minimum of funding, he said.

Robinson said employees will be dealt with fairly should their position or function within MNR change.

Assistance for relocation or retraining will be provided when necessary.

He pointed out that the initiative for this restructuring came from within the MNR in response to the changing needs of resource management.

The MNR will begin with new overall organizational structure on April 1.
