Crybaby: starring Johnny Depp

Rating: 0 poor10 excellent

Poor Johnny Depp may not be able to cry, but the rest of us can - from boredom. This movie is supposed to be a satirical slap at the stereo-type teen movies of the 1950's, but it is just silly.

Depp plays the main character, Crybaby, an anti-social misfit, who is leader of a gang called The Drapes. All the girls in town drool over him because of his one claim to fame; his inability to cry more than one perfect teardrop. Amy Locane is Alison, the cutie, perfect, fresh-faced girl Crybaby falls in love with. She is tired of being good all the time (shades of Grease here) and decides to give his way of life a try.

But her boyfriend Baldwin (Stephen Mailer) has other ideas. He and his gang try to bust up the party at Turkey Point trailer park, where Crybaby lives. The cops arrive and arrest only Drape members and Crybaby is thrown into a juvenile facility.

A spiteful wanabe girlfriend of Crybaby proclaims to the press that she is pregnant with Crybaby's child and they are engaged. Alison believes it and announces her hatred of Crybaby on the radio.

Baldwin and Alison are hired to sing at the Enchanted Forest theme park. While there, Alison realizes that Baldwin only cares for her as a possession and does not really love her. The Drapes take her back to town to try and get Crybaby free.

This movie is filled with such idiotic scenes, it's almost torture to watch them. Crybaby and Alison confess to each other that they are both orphans. Now this coincidence might have been believable if left there. But the writers felt the need to extend these sad tales with Alison's parents being killed at the exact same time in different planes that collide together and Crybaby's parents were executed because his dad was the Alphabet bomber. The ending, with Alison flying off a motorcycle and making a perfect landing in Crybaby's lap, is pure carnival side-show stuff.

Don't bother with this movie, unless you like muttering "Cheez, this is stupid" about 1000 times. I give it a 1.

Desk File Materials:

1. cereal boxes
2. scrap paper or material
3. cardboard tubes from paper towel or toilet paper or heavier calender tubes.

Method:

Cut cereal boxes as shown in diagram. Decorate with scraps of wallpaper to match room or drapery fabric or paint. Several of these can be used together on a desk.

Cut wide-based heavy tube about 2 inches long, and a small tube about 6 inches long. Cover tubes with same fabric or paint to match boxes.

Glue tubes together all sides touching and glue also to styrofoam or corrugated cardboard base.

The base can also be made large enough to contain the boxes as well as the tubes. Paint the base. The boxes hold books or correspondence. The tubes hold pens, rulers, paper clips, etc.
