HOW MANY VOLUNTEER FIRE-FIGHTERS ARE THERE IN CANADA?

Northern Insights

 diving in deep water.
 The most recent mystery began on August 12, 1989. At 6:25 in the morning, the Schreiber OPP received a call, claiming there was a diving death on the Gunilda. The police were told, incorrectly at first, that someone from a group of eight Michigan divers had died. The Michigan group had been diving on the Gunilda at the same time as a smaller southern Ontario group, which included Barrett.
 Eventually, the police determined they were looking for the body of 53 year old Reginald Barrett, from Brampton. Barrett was a senior provincial civil servant - regional director for Metro Toronto of the Ministry of Correctional Services. When the police arrived in Rossport, they found that Barrett's party was not out looking for his body. They were on shore! Some local residents have since wondered out loud whether Barrett's party was really out diving that morning at all, or whether the death occurred some time before, and that there was a delay in reporting it to the police.

 That's only the start of this mystery. Next week, I'll finish this story, and point out the questions that haven't been answered yet about Barrett's death.
