The Witches starring Jasen Fisher

Rating: 0 poor.....10 excellent

This was (I believe) Jim Henson's last movie before his untimely death. While it is not a muppet movie, it is very entertaining and the fine touches from his Creature Shop help to make it so.

Jasen Fisher is Luke. After his parents are killed, he and his grandmother Helga (Mai Zetterling) decide to go to England. Life seems to be getting better when Helga is felled by diabetes. They decide to take a vacation at the sea-side for her health. While there, they encounter grave danger.

Angelica Huston is the Grand High Witch and her coven is meeting at the same resort under the guise of The Committee To Prevent Child Abuse. In reality, they hate all children and are planning to get rid of them. The High Witch has a secret formula. Anyone who injects it will turn into a mouse.

Luke gets himself trapped behind a screen in their meeting room. He sees them turn a boy named Bruno into a mouse. The witches catch Luke and turn him into a mouse as well. Now the 2 boys must convince Helga and Bruno's parents that it's really them. Then they must stop the witches before they can begin their diabolical plan.

This is a delightful movie. Angelica Huston turns in a marvelous performance with her mischievously German accent. There is suspense, drama, comedy and more here.

The only problem I had was a scene where 50 or so mice are swarming around. Not a pretty site in my opinion. Nevertheless, I enjoyed this movie and give it a 8 1/2.
