Historical cookbook produced to support conservation of Rosspport Union Church

The first historical designation in Rosspport was given to the Rosspport Union Church in 1988. Built in 1901 and dedicated the following year by Reverend Hagan, the little church has remained an unaffiliated protestant church to this day.

Although the church is not actually used there are still those who believe in its preservation and its part in the history of Rosspport. A year was spent contacting past and present residents of Rosspport in preparation of a recipe book.

Cameron Minor, a former school teacher shared his memories of Rosspport and enjoying meals with families. Brief biographies were written on each person donating a recipe as well as using recipes from the early 1800 and 1900's.

Three years in the making and more than just a cookbook, Rosspport Recipes Past and Present is a bit of history as well - appropriately as all proceeds will go to the continued preservation of the little church.

With its historical designation in place, the Rosspport Union Church will remain physically what it was on that dedication day in 1902.

It's back to the books for post secondary students

By Kelly Moore
The News

It's that time of year once again - the time when there is a mass exodus of young people as they move to the cities in search of higher education.

Time to spend the hard earned summer dollars on tuition, books, residence, activity fees, computer software, rent, notebooks, coffee makers, and a multitude of other academic necessities.

Time to burn gallons of the midnight oil studying the thousands of -ologies and -isms that are essential to the upper echelons of academia.

By the end of August, most students are anxious to return to the familiar routine of school. They are preparing to leave the comforts of home and head off to various parts of the province in search of knowledge and a really good pub.

Lakehead University is a popular destination for many area students, and it is beginning to draw the attention of others from around the province.

Rosemary Costa is a fourth-year Business Administration student at Lakehead. She is looking forward to returning to campus life.

"I'm looking forward to everything except exams," she said. "And I have to write a thesis this year - that makes me a little nervous."

Shannon Moore is starting her first year at Lakehead this fall. She is not worried about moving away from home.

"I've been away from home before, so I don't think this will be much different," she said.

But Moore is planning on keeping busy. "I'll get a part-time job and I might try out for the varsity volleyball team."

Kim Borsa is in her second year of an Executive Administration program, and is transferring from Sault College to Confederation College.

"I really like the program I'm in," she said, "but I would rather live in Thunder Bay. I like that city better."

Jody Speer is in her second year at Sault College. She is looking forward to getting back to residence.
