

Snomo- biles and tourism said.

"If not, we'll have to depend on provincial money a lot more, as well as local clubs getting loans."

If the support comes, Lumely says the plan can be completed within five years. If not, he said it will take seven.

Trail development

Quebec, Minnesota, Michigan and Wisconsin are areas known for their trails, Lumely said, and in order to compete with them, Ontario must have a competitive trail system.

"People come to ride great, great distances," he said.

NOSA has designed a plan it calls the Trans Ontario Provincial (TOP) Trail System, which outlines where trails should go.

"Don't look at it and say 'Hey, there's not trail from Terrace Bay to Marathon,'" he said. "The plan's not cast in stone."

NOSA is consulting local clubs to see what their trail needs are, Lumely said.

"We know that changes to the (TOP) trail design are needed" he said.

Tourist dollars

Local clubs should not be opposed to the idea of tourists using their trails, Lumely said, for one reason: money.

"The government will give you money to develop tourist trails," he said. "You want tourists so you can develop your trails."

Nick Prebushewski, president of the Lake Superior Club, said he's impressed by what Lumely had to say.

Trail groomer

The local club plans to join NOSA, and sell the $55 trail permits required by NOSA.

"We have a core membership of about 65," Prebushewski said. "The club is starting to come together now."

The club is considering spending $55,000 on a trail groomer, he added.

"You have to provide the product," he said. "The interest is there."

Terrace Bay Tourism Director Susan Johnson said she was "very excited" about what Lumely had to say about the tourism potential of the trail plan.

"We have to go slow," Johnson said. "But what he said was motivating. We will be meeting with the local group (to discuss the trail plan)."

The next meeting of the Lake Superior Family Snowgoers Snowmobile Association is scheduled for Nov. 7.
