and at his home in Palmer Rapids, Ont., were unsuccessful.

However, according to the minutes from the special Council Meeting, Lacharity said there wasn't enough room at the Aguasabon Trailer Park for the 20-25 trucks involved. He also accused council of having a "conflict" with his company.

"He accused all of us of having a conflict of interest," said Ziegler. "And I reminded him that I work for Kimberly Clark, and the other town councillors are school teachers."

Ziegler said it would be a different matter if there was no bylaw and Council was still turning down the request.

"But the bylaw was introduced by the planning committee, it was passed by Council, and that's the way it is," he said.

"We've had to turn down two other requests, and you didn't hear a big furour over it.

"And after talking with the local business people I've talked to, I'm not changing at all—they've heard the right side of the story, and they've agreed (with what Council has decided)."

The Township of Terrace Bay, which at times has more than $500,000 deposited in the bank, isn't pleased with the CIBC decision.

"We're not happy," says Terrace Bay Reeve Jim Ziegler.

"In fact, we're going to start looking around to see what rate of interest we can get at other banks."

But Mike Thomas says that the CIBC was the last chartered bank to offer local commercial banking.

"There isn't another bank in the area that isn't centralized, and I hope they (the township) realizes that," he says.

"Besides, our customers will get better service, not worse."
