during that time—including a $7,052 profit last year—its accumulated deficit stood at $17,935 as of Sept. 30, 1991.

OSDIC regulations for credit unions state that credit unions had to eliminate their deficits within five years. Amalgamating with Schreiber was intended as a means of getting rid of the deficit.

"It would almost have doubled the credit union for us if the amalgamation had gone ahead," says Halcrow. "That would have enabled us to go to the Ministry of Financial Institutions and apply for things like changing our bylaws to allow us to loan out larger sums of money."

She says that right now, their loan limit stands at $15,000. But by doubling their assets, they could apply for permission to increase that limit to $20,000-25,000.

"Then we could start dealing with new car buyers," she says. "We could also get into the RRSP business a lot more than we are right now. We could have been bigger and better by growing together."

But Halcrow says that an amalgamation right now wasn't feasible for the SCCU.

"Amalgamating the books right now would have changed the liquidity position of SCCU drastically," she says. "It's not unrealistic to say that it would have been more than two years we wouldn't have been able to pay out dividends. The Ministry just wouldn't allow it."

TBCCU Chairperson Dave Falzetta says they're working with OSDIC to try and come up with other arrangements to settle their deficit.

"It came back into the windshield and peeled the top of the car right back, just like a can opener," he said. "Moose really do quite a job on a vehicle."

◀ Competing successfully in the office-furniture market demands high quality and competitive pricing. Canadian companies provide both, which would explain why they export more than $300 million worth of office furnishings annually.
▼ Canada's recreational watercraft builders experienced some rough sailing during the recession. But with better times ahead and better products on the market, the future looks a lot brighter. That's good news for boating enthusiasts and the 3,000 Canadians who work in this $300 million industry.

▶ Small appliances aren't small when it comes to job creation. Some 5,000 workers in 65 companies produce nearly $500 million worth of small electrical appliances in Canada. No small achievement!

▶ It may look simply like footwear to you, but it's part of a $1.5 billion industry that employs more than 12,000 people.

On May 12, MacAlpine and OPSEU are taking their case for all this before the Timber Management Hearings in Toronto. OPSEU has prepared a written lengthy written submission and MacAlpine will be one of OPSEU's witnesses.

It takes a lot of courage to be a whistle blower, and even more moxie to appear at a public hearing and question the actions of your employer. In our complex technocratic society, having people inside the system is almost a necessity to protect the public interest. The least we can do is give them some legislated protection from retribution.
