

Science North pays a visit to St. Martin School

Science North representatives Julie Perret and Oliver Horn visited Holy Angels and St. Martin School (above photos) last week, bringing with them a number of displays from Sudbury. Among them was a planetarium that detailed all the star clusters visible in our hemisphere, and allowed classes to experience a simulation of warp speed. The topic of the presentation was dinosaurs, and the students impressed the Science North employees with their knowledge. Perret and Horn also brought along live animals, which the student were allowed to touch. Top left, students rummage through a collection of fossils; top right, a student holds a water snake; above left, Perret holds a live baby cockroach from Mexico; above right, she holds a painted turtle. The classes also found out what it would be like to have a tail, how tall they might grow up to be, and tried to place different animals in different eras.
