

Community Church marks 41 years

The Terrace Bay Community Church celebrated its 41st anniversary last Sunday night with a potluck supper and displays illustrating the church's history.

The church, which boasts a congregation of 180 families, traces its roots back to the late 1940s, when the mill first opened in Terrace Bay.

United Church members originally held services in the men's dining hall, in the building that today is home to the Moose Lodge.

But as the houses were built and Terrace Bay became settled, the employee's wives began arriving to join their husbands in the new community. The congregation quickly outgrew the dining hall, and the need for their own building became apparent.
