

The great outdoors provided a learning experience for Robert Baldwin School students last week. Children in Grades 3 to 5 ventured to Camp Manitou on Twiss Rd. to learn to snowshoe and survive in the wild. Hypothermia and frost-bite were among topics covered in the day-long sessions. Each morning was dedicated to snowshoeing, an activity which obviously took some amount of practice to master.

The hush is gone from library

When is a library not a library?
In the past the word library often brought to mind a place where all were to be quiet and talk in hushed tones and a stone-faced librarian constantly spraying the occupants with "sh", "sh", "sh". Libraries have changed over the years and none have changed more than the school libraries.

Not too long ago a school library consisted of a shelf of books in the back of the classroom. If a school was fortunate enough to have a room for the library, often no one was available to look after it. Teachers were able to take their class for weekly book exchange, locking the library door after they were finished. Now most schools have a library area and a teacher-librarian to bring children and learning materials together.

The shelf of books has grown into specialized collections of not only books but records, cassettes, filmstrips, videos, and computer programs, picked to support the curriculum of the school. The teachers depend on these materials for classroom program support.

The library at E. W. Foster is bright and cheerful. It is rarely silent. There is continual hum of activity. Children come and go changing books everyday if they wish. They participate in activities worked out by their teacher and the teacher-librarian. Throughout the day children from all different grade levels work in the library using the listening and viewing centers, reference materials and computers. One of the best things is to curl up in Mr. Foster's chair with a good story.

Crafts, storytimes, special visitors, films and computer clubs make our library a popular spot. It takes a lot of energy and hands to make all of these exciting things happen. We have a full time teacher-librarian to work with the students and assist teachers with programs and a dedicated group of parents who help with the operation of library services and computer programs for the children.

At E. W. Foster the library is the center of the school, not only physical, but as a place of learning and enjoyment. It is an extension of every classroom in the school. A student given free time usually asks, "Can I go to the library?"

Libraries certainly have changed over the years. Our library is not what people may think, but rather it is a learning activity center and a meeting place for students, teachers and parents — it is a place we all like to be.

Household Hints

Stale potato chips are soggy and no fun at all. Spread on a cookie sheet and crisp 'em up in a 350° oven for 3 to 5 minutes.

Want to save on paper towels? Cut through a new roll crosswise almost to the cardboard tube, and you'll get a HALF towel each time you tear.

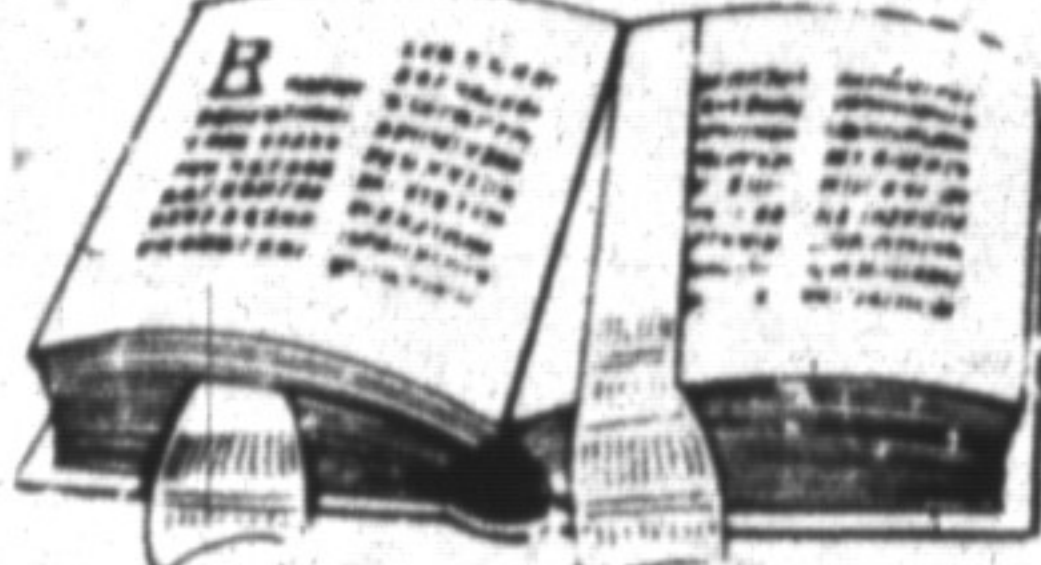

Free patches: buy jeans in the longest length you can, the cut-off fabric will make patches that match later.

Cake of soap is an easy-to-use lubricant for drawer runners that stick.

Here's how to find a lost earring or a contact lens that dropped onto a carpet: cover tip end of the hose (without the brush) with a thin cloth, then vacuum the area. Vacuum will pick up the lost object and hold it against the fabric. Check periodically to see what you've captured.
