Football. The fourth match of the season, between Lynce's Creek team and the Maple Leafs took place at the Athletic grounds on Tuesday evening. Resulting in favor of the Maple Leaf team by a score of 1-0. The Maple Leafs have never yet been beaten.

A very pretty wedding took place at Stony Lake on Thursday afternoon last, the contracting parties being Mr. Frank H. Dumble, of St. Paul, Minnesota, son of Mr. D. W. Dumble, police magistrate of Peterborough, and Miss Nellie Eck, of Preston, formerly teacher at the Ontario Ladies' College, Whitby. The wedding was celebrated in the presence of a few relatives and friends by Rev. Geo. Warren, of Lakefield.

Miss Bertha Nicholson, sister of the groom, acted as bridesmaid, while Mr. Fred Dumble was the best man. The CHRONICLE unites with the people of Whitby in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Dumble long life and happiness.

An unusual feud. Of all the excruciating noises, those made by a man practising upon an alto horn are the worst. Sometimes ago, on Henry St., one of the salvation army officers purchased a horn. After a few hours practice he was able to play fairly well. Now he can reel off simple hymns in a very agreeable manner. But this was not the worst. The disreputable came to stay. Another chap borrowed a horn and began a regular sally of the musical scale. He made assaults early in the morning, at mid-day, and at evening. The claret remained intact. The scene was continued. The assistant possessed a musical taste that would throw the possessor into the saw dust heap to hide itself from brazen shame. His horn is of a pronounced brass hue. It has for the last few years attracted a crowd in the neighborhood where it hangs up in the decrepit stage of conservatism. The neighbors have been reviewing their past lives to discover what sin they have committed that they should be afflicted by such harsh sounds. When one returns from his work in the evening he knows he is yet a mile away from the horn performing. No need for an alarm clock to awake one at 5 a. m.—the horn is abroad at dawn. The dinner bell has been sold for old copper—the chap's power—the power of music. We praise his persistence; but we know music is not his forte, though it may be for his. We advise him to go into the auctioneer's business where he will find ample scope for his surplus gas. As he uses his power now, he makes the lives of his dear neighbors in his malcontent of his horn, and in the abuse of his neighbors' nerves, next week's CHRONICLE will record an assassination, and it won't be that of the horn. The prevalent opinion is summed up in the words of one who was awakened from his afternoon nap, "D— that horn!"

Obituary. Miss Mary McAuliffe died Tuesday night after a lingering illness, aged 65. The deceased was the eldest of a family of two brothers and two sisters who have lived in Whitby from very early in the history of the town. She was of a very quiet and retiring disposition but good-hearted and numerous to those who knew her. Miss Johanna and Cornelius were the best known of the four. Father Jeffcott celebrated requiem mass in St. John's church at the funeral Thursday morning.

Fires along the railway. The Grand Trunk railway men have a great deal of difficulty in putting out fires these dry times, and in spite of all they can do the company has to pay many bills of damages. On Monday afternoon a fire started in Smith's field in the south ward, east of Centre street. The east half of the field was soon painted black, and the east and south fences took fire. The spread of the fire was so rapid, and all in the direction of the house along Brock street in the south ward, that the people became alarmed and telephoned uptown for the fire brigade. The fire alarm was rung, and a general rush made for the south ward, and the crowd arrived there in time to tear away the fences and stop the spread of fire. Had the fire crossed the base line Mr. John Riley's residence would have been in great danger, and a good many are of opinion that many houses would have been burned in a very short time, as there is not much available water in that neighborhood.

Harvesters for the Northwest. On Tuesday there was a small exodus of young men from this vicinity to the northwest for the harvest excursions. Those who went from this vicinity so far as we could learn their names are as follows: Whitby and vicinity—W. J. Pardon, Frank McBrady, Fred Merritt, Harry Sutherland, H. Coffey, F. Sharrard, Wm. Jury; Brooklin—Gray, Craig, Webster and Medland; Pickering—Mullett, Chapman, Clark and Keslick. The prospects for work out there are fairly good, and besides a great many of the young men who go out there take up farms. There could be no better argument in favor of emigrating to a country than the fact that it gives such enormous crops that train loads of wheat to be gathered in to harvest the grain. No young farmer who is not doing well here should hesitate to go to Manitoba and cultivate the unlimited wealth of rich soil to be found there. Those who went there from here twelve or fifteen years ago have all done exceedingly well, and there are many of them.

Cap Hughes and John Gilpin. On Sunday evening last a number of our Whitby young men took their usual ride to Oshawa to see the pretty maids of that town, and among others was Ezra Hughes, popularly known as "Cap," aged 13. Cap does not aspire to flirt with the girls, in fact he becomes highly indignant when accused of such nonsense, and usually thumps the daylight out of the party who lays the charge. Still, he goes to Oshawa with the other boys, and went Sunday night as usual. Yankee Hartick has a girl in Oshawa that he is badly gone on, and so have some dozen or so of other fellows from here, but we withhold their names for the present, seeing that they are not concerned in this little incident. Yankee Hartick saw Cap at Oshawa and offered him a ride home if he would mind the livery horse until after Yankee had paraded his girl a while. He gave Cap 5 cents to buy bananas with, and went his way a-girling. Cap never would go to school if parents has forced matters until he has learned enough to read the famous ride of John Gilpin, and he thought he would take just such another ride out of Hartick's livery horse. He drove it from the park and headed it west along the Kingston road. Taking a half mile to get speed up, he had still three and a half miles to go by his race. And a race it was. Up hill and down that horse was urged to his highest speed. Sometimes it would almost collapse before reaching the top of one of the long hills, and Cap would very considerably let it slacken until the summit of the hill was reached, but the down grade found the horse invariably at top speed, and when Cap could not hold himself in the buggy seat he would slide down in the bottom. He held to the lines all the while. All along the Kingston road between Oshawa and Whitby people ran out as they heard and saw the drying horse and carriage, and all had a subject for discussion as to how a boy could hold his place in the buggy with a runaway horse; but none could get to the road fast enough to stop Cap's famous ride. When he arrived at Whitby he turned south toward the bay, and when he reached the lake he turned about and started north again. By this time Hartick had followed with another horse, and saw Cap coming north again. Cap saw him, too, and tried to make the horse go so fast that Hartick would not be able to stop it, but the animal was too much excited to make a swift run and Hartick stopped it after being carried a rod or two, and removed the youthful hero of this wonderful ride from his perch.

An amateur's experience. Mr. James Ayres, formerly of this town, and Mr. Stewart Wells, two amateur bicyclists, Toronto, started out on Sunday morning last to visit friends in Whitby. They were making good time, and when they reached the Halfway house were approached by a couple of "scorchers." James, not caring to take their dust, let out at a rate of going that would have done justice to anyone in a road race, and just when he had attained full speed his bicycle struck a rut, which caused him to give some acrobatic performance the like of which was never seen in a circus ring. When Jim got up and came to his senses, it was found that his wheel had a puncture, while his bloomers were beyond recognition. After waiting by the roadside for a while along came his friend Stewart, who had been handicapped in the race. However, after making repairs they were enabled to make Whitby, and after partaking of some refreshments took the evening express train for home.

White Mountain Special. Those who see fit to go down to the G. T. R. track about 5 o'clock p. m. on Mondays will have the pleasure of seeing, westward bound, one of the finest trains that crosses this continent. It consists of five Pullmans vestibuled, and on board may be found every convenience from a barber shop and kitchen to a grand drawing room. It runs about fifty miles an hour, and stips up so much dust these dry days that when one looks at it from behind only the top of the car can be seen in a sort of haze or fog. Between Montreal and Toronto it stops three times—Kingston, Belleville and Port Hope. Its trips are from Portland to Chicago, and it only runs as long as the tourist season lasts, probably until Sept. 1st. Notwithstanding the grandeur of the train fares are not exorbitant, and being only about $50 with pullmans both ways, do not doubt very much if such a train is profitable, but there must be some means of hustling people who have money and whose time is valuable.

Fod Murray Dead. From Wednesday's Globe: Shortly before midnight on Monday Police Constable Forrest was doing duty in plain clothes in the vicinity of King and York streets. He noticed a gang of men talking together. Soon after he met P. C. Sockett, and they walked together as far as Pearl street, when the men, seeing them, strayed off towards King and Simcoe. A little later they saw the men running away, and almost at the same time a woman approached in breathless haste, saying that a man had been knocked down in a scuffle at the corner of the pavement in an unconscious condition. The policemen went at once to the place indicated, and found that the injured man had been removed to Kip Huff's restaurant, 175 King street west. When they went in there they saw him sitting on a chair, in a dazed condition, and at once recognized him as Charles Murray, a young man who has been hanging about York street a good deal recently. Murray, while in a semi-conscious condition, was taken very ill, and when stretched out on the floor a large cut in the back of his head showed that he had received there a very serious injury. A young man who was with him stated that the crowd had been drinking, and that during a row Murray had been thrown down. He was removed in Joe Ryan's hack to his boarding house at 24 McCauley street, where he was placed in bed and carefully watched all night. Dr. McKeown attended him. At 7 o'clock Tuesday morning Murray died, having failed to fully regain consciousness from the time his injury was sustained. Three hours later Constable Forrest arrested Geo. Badgley as being one of the men of the crowd in whose presence Murray received the injuries which proved fatal. He was in bed at his room, near the foot of Jarvis street, and appeared greatly surprised when told of Murray's death. He admitted having been with the crowd, but denies being responsible for the blow that was struck. Though only a painter by trade, according to police information, a very unenviable record. He has been out of prison only a few days, and his brother, who is also said to have served terms of imprisonment, is believed to have been with him on Monday night. Murray was 25 years of age, and made his living by brass polishing. For some time past he had done little work, knocking about most of the time in bad company. The police know nothing of him except what they have seen of late. Murray had been drinking during the evening, and the belief appears to be that death was caused by the blow he received when he was knocked down by Badgley, or anyone else, in the crowd. Whether his death was the affair say that a fight had been going on for some little time. An inquest into the cause of Charles Murray's death was opened by Coroner Johnson at Haskins' hotel, last night. P. C. Sockett, in his evidence, gave practically the same account that is given above. Dr. McKeown, of McCauley street, testified that he was called to 24 McCauley street about 7 o'clock yesterday morning. He found Murray with blood flowing from a wound on the right side of the head, and in a very serious condition. He died early in the morning. The wound was such as one as might have been caused by a blow from a blunt instrument. A piece of pavement might have caused it. If deceased had been thrown upon the pavement he might have sustained such an injury, or a fall from the knob of a cane might have caused it. Dr. Pepler read the report of the postmortem examination, showing that death had been caused by the blow on the head, and the inquest was adjourned. Up had been thrown upon the pavement, and had been seeking for a number of days, and posed to be implicated in Murray's death.
