No one brought into casual contact with Edward Flint would have suspected that he was of unsound mind. None the less he was one of the most dangerous lunatics that I had in the X-asylum.

He had been an exceptionally able been making a large income. Overwork had, however, told upon him, and he was suddenly seized, while in company of some friends, with acute homicidal mania. He had been with me four years. and, on the average, had an attack of mania every six or seven weeks. During his period of lunacy he was so ferocious as to demand constant care and supervision, and, of course, as a result, had to be detained in the asylum.

In his saner intervals no man could have desired a pleasanter companion, and it was my constant habit to spend half an hour or so a day in his congenial com. with my 'revenge' carefully packed in a pany. One day just before his periodical small box. On arrival at my house attack, he told me the following story, which is of such a unique character that I give it just as he told it to me. At its conclusion, wrought up to a pitch of fury, he made a determined attack upon me, and I nearly paid for my tale with my life, being only rescued with difficulty by the attendants.

and had never had the least inclination toward female society, contenting myself with my work and my books. One day, however, I had to wait upon an old gentleman who had recently come to our town, for the purpose of drawing up his will. When this was done I was introduced to his daughter, a girl about twenty. Ethel Millikin was not what might have been called a beauty, still, I knew at once that I had met my fate. To you, doctor, married young and happily, it may sound ridiculous for a middle aged man to be talking of love, yet to me it was a desperate fact. I will not bore you with her description; suffice it to say that trembling, I took my leave and went back to my office. There I thought long and deeply over this new phase in my life, and finally resolved that, cost what it might, I would marry Miss Millikin, and that if I couldn't-no one else remedy, why, my reputation as an em should.

"It was clearly absurd for me to attempt to win her love in the usual way, the disparity in our years was too great, so I decided to win her respect first.

"I took time over it, and quietly interested myself in her pet projects, sub scribed to her sick fund, lent her books, and was of use to her in many ways. Already she regarded me as a very dear friend, and, I have no doubt, would soon have learned to love me.

"One night I was to take her and her sister to the theatre and had booked three stalls. At the last minute, bowever, to my secret joy, her sister had a bad head ache and was unable to go. We went as arranged and I decided to put my for tunes to the touch during the performance. On our arrival the theater was crowded, and, to my intense annoyance. I found a young client of mine, Sir Ed ward Berkley, in the next stall to ours. I was obliged to introduce him, and had the mortification of seeing that Miss Mil. | that suit you! likin had made an impression on him What chance had I against a young. wealthy and handsome man? And with jealous eyes I already saw the Chateau d'Espagne of love, that I had so carefully reared, in ruins.

"On our return from the play Berkley nsisted on accompanying us to Mr. Milliken's house and was introduced by me

"The acquaintance ripened into friend ship and friendship into love, which I was powerless to prevent; and one day Berkley burst into my office in a great state of excitement and asked me to congratulate him!

"Me, of all men! How I managed but, to add to the hitter irony of the house until I stood once more in my old settlements. I could have cheerfully murdered him as he sat in his chair, so bright and cheerful, with the happiness of youth glowing on his face. Suddenly possible to win her. Sitting at her side, his face twitched, and he hastily put up his hands to his brow.

"What is it?' I asked eagerly, hoping he might be going to be ill. "'Nothing-only neuralgia. I have suffered from it for years and have tried everything and seen all the doctors, but you now-I have you at last'"____ to no avail. So now I make the best of it.'

leave to go and make love—curse him ! to his fiancee. "No one knows what days and nights

I spent; although I worked until my body was aching, my brain would not let me sleep. I roamed up and down my DUDDS room planning impossible methods of revenge, only to see the futility of it all. The times are suited for melodrama, and I could only watch and-wait.

"One morning I crawled down to the office feeling utterly done up, and listlessly examined my correspondence. Among it I noted one from an old triend who was practicing as a physician in Paris. Tossing the rest of the letters to the managing clerk, I began to read my friend's long letter. Suddenly a para graph in it seemed to stand before my eyes as if written in fire. It ran thus:-

"You will, I know, be keenly interested in a marvellous discovery that Dr. Luys of this city has just made, He is our great authority on brain diseases and also dabbles in hypnotism and other kindred subjects.

"He has established beyond any doubt that it is possible to remove the delusions of an insane person—previously hypno-tized—by means of a thin magnetized steel band worn around the patient's fore-head for about a week. This is suffici-ently marvellous, but it is nothing to the fact that if a same man or woman wears the band previously used by the lunstic the delusions of the latter pass in their entirety to the wearer, who becomes an echo in every action of his predecessor."

"At last! At last! Crushing the paper in my hand, I reveiled in the exquisite revenue the letter revealed to me. My brain, preternaturally excited, in a few moments planned the whole scheme. Violently ringing my bell, I informed the clerk who came hurrying in that I had to go to Paris at once on urgent business. I also whole schemes are whole schemes are who came hurrying in that I had to go to Paris at once on urgent business. I also whother taken internally or applied out.

On the journey I rehearsed and rehearsed the scheme I had planned out until I thought it perfect. I at once, on arrival, lawyer, and, up to his fortieth year, had hastened to my friend's house and pre tended that I had not received his letter. After breakfast he took me to Dr. Luy's clinic, and there I saw that the powers! he laid claim to were indeed his. Se lecting the needlest looking of his assistants I gently touched him and drew him aside. In my best French I told him that if he came to my hotel that evening with the band just removed from the lunatic who had been relieved before my eyes, I would give him 2,500 francs, or £100. At first he would not listen, but at last he did, and I went back to my hotel content. That evening I left Paris slept for twelve hours, a thing I had no done for weeks, and awoke ready to carry my scheme through.

What a Hamilton Manufacturer Has to Say.

Mr. James Brayley speaks for the public good.

THE PROPER POLICY.

Our representative interviewed Mr. James Brayley, of Hamilton, at his office, 58 King William Street. Mr. Brayley is an enterprising business man, and one of Hamilton's foremost manufacturers. His goods, Saddlery hardware, punches, dies, etc., are known from Halifax to Vancouver, and stand very high in the estimation of the trade.

Mr. Brayley said: "For years I have been troubled with gravel and weakness of the kidneys. I had to stand up and clench my teeth when urinating, so intense was the pain. The pains around my loins where almost intolerable and I felt as though a cat were being pulled down my back by the hind legs.

"I went from bad to worse till at last I could not urinate at all, and had to be operated on. I had no confidence in anything, and made up my mind to suffer torture to my dying day. Reading the testimony published by the Doan Kidney Pills Co., I saw a similar case to my own, and, being in constant agony, decided to give them a trial, and got a box of the pills from Spackman's drug store, at the corner of Market Square.

"It did me no good, so I got another, and another, until I had taken four boxes, and was about giving up when relief came. I continued to take them till the pain left my back, and I am now as limber as an eel. Instead of getting up a dozen times a night I never get up more than once now. The urine is now perfectly clear and has no sediment of any kind. "I am delighted to testify in behalf of Doan's
