It is not often that we have more reason to congratulate Hon. Thos. Conant than this week. A lady lost a valuable cape about six weeks ago; and advertised it in the Reformer. It so happened that Mr. Conant had found the garment, and he at once drove to the Reformer office to find if there was to be a dollar paid to the finder, and upon receiving the said dollar in lawful money of Canada, the Hon. Thos. gave up the cape, although the latter was worth $25 or $30. Not. only did this prove Mr. Conant's honesty, but it also displayed an active and healthy business capacity and lively acquisitiveness in securing the reward for the return of the article to its owner. It is not everybody that would return a $30 cape for $1. Some people may say that Mr. Conant should not have kept the garment a month until it was advertised for, but should have handed it in at a newspaper office as soon as found, in order that it might be restored to its owner as soon as possible, but being confined to the house for a few days, one can see that in handing the article in the Hon. Mr. Conant would have lost the $1 reward. Many point to a case recently where a son of poor parents gave up a pair of gold spectacles at the Reformer office and declin-The members of Sons of Temperance are ed a reward for doing what he held to be urgently requested to be at their hall next his manifest duty.
