It all came about through listening at the parlor door. Eavesdropping is always a reprehensible proceeding, and when indulged in by a person who has good grounds for believing that the person's own self forms the topic of conversation likely to be overheard, the practice becomes altogether unpardonable. Without desiring in the least to justify the breach of good manners committed when I, Emma Summerford, applied my ear to the keyhole of our best room door on a certain important occasion that happened prove. quite recently. I am contrained to think, nevertheless, that there was some little excuse for my behavior.
