

Town Talk.

The Public Aroused During the Past Week.

Crowds of People Called at A. H. Allin's Drug Store to Get Free Samples of

DR. HOBBS SPARAGUS KIDNEY PILLS.

Hundreds Now Testing the Remedy in this Vicinity.

NOW FOR RESULTS.

An intense interest was created in this vicinity by the announcement in last week's issue, that a free package of Dr. Hobbs Sparagus Kidney Pills would be given away to any person who would call and ask for it at A. H. Allin's Drug Store.

This interest was shown by the unexpectedly numerous calls made at the above store. Many of the callers, who are sufferers from kidney complaints, expressed their astonishment at the offer to make no charge for the samples. Heretofore, the practice of medicine proprietors is to require pay in advance, and let the afflicted take the chance of cure.

The proprietors of Dr. Hobbs Sparagus Kidney Pills are reversing this practice, preferring to exercise the gold rule of "doing to others as they would be done by."

They believe, because it has been demonstrated in every instance, that if those effected with kidney troubles once try these Pills, they will be convinced of their great merit, and get well by their use.

For this reason they make arrangements with Mr. Allin to freely distribute as many sample boxes as should be called for, during the last seven days. Every one who asked for a box was given it free of charge.

Some of those calling for packages, have expressed themselves as follows:—"The science of medicine has certainly advanced when the proprietors of a remedy can stake so much upon a free and universal test of its merits."

"The honest and straightforward manner in which the medicine is offered for trial, gives me confidence to use it. I hope it will prove helpful."

"Dr. Hobbs announced that he has made a great discovery which will cure and build up the kidneys, and his offer to prove it free of charge is a novel proposition, and gives me great hope of relief."

"This is certainly a fair proposition. I have everything to win and nothing to lose."

Many will be curious to know what are the results of the test of these pills now going on in the neighborhood. It is a little too soon to look for results, probably another week will make them known. If those getting the samples have faithfully followed the directions, they will be encouraged to persevere in their use.

It is gratifying to learn that wherever similar distributions have taken place, there has followed a large sale of the remedy, and many letters of gratitude have been written by those who have regained lost health.

Every person who knows or suspects that his kidneys or urinary passages are affected; every person who has any of the following symptoms, should make a test of these pills without delay, viz.: Pains in the Back or Sides, Headache, Nervousness, Frequent Thirst, Shortness of Breath, Puffiness of the Eyelids, Swelling of the Feet and Ankles, Dark Colored or Scanty Urine, with albuminous or other deposits in the urine, or too frequent urination.

For the benefit of interested persons, living out of town who, from any reason, failed to get a sample, Dr. Hobbs authorizes us to say, if you will cut out the coupon below and mail it to the Hobbs Remedy Co., Chicago, Ill., with your name and address, a sample box of these pills will be sent you by mail, postpaid, and free of expense.

She—Have you always lived up to your income?

He—No; I've got a nice little sum laid by. But you do your ask? Surely you have no sordid motives in—

She (interrupting)—Oh, no. It's all right. I merely wished to let you know that I do not care to be the wife of a man who marries to save money.

Murdered at Her Own Door.

TRAGEDY A SHORT DISTANCE FROM GALT—TWO YOUNG MEN UNDER ARREST—ON SUSPICION.

Galt, Aug. 15.—Lying face downward in a shallow grave, with an ugly wound in the skull, the partially decomposed body of Mrs. Anthony Orr was discovered this morning by some neighbors who were searching for the missing woman.

The discovery clears up the mystery of the disappearance of Mrs. Orr, a mystery which has been agitating this section of the country for a week, but it brings to light a murder.

Whoever committed the crime did it in broad daylight, within a few yards of the house of Mrs. Orr, where her little daughter lay sleeping at the time, then dragged the body behind the house, dug a temporary grave in the sand, jammed the body in and covered it over lightly with earth. They a couple of hundred yards from the house shows that the murderer sought to remove his victim from the first grave and secret it in a spot where there would in all probability be little chance of finding it.

TWO YOUNG FELLOWS IN JAIL.

Walden Sidney Trevelyan, a young man about 27 years of age, a medical student from McGill College, and Jas. B. Allison, aged 17 years, a laborer on the Orr farm, are in the Galt jail, the charge against them being complicity in the murder.

The Orr farm is about three miles out from Galt; the house stands about one third of a mile in from the road. Just near the farm and south of it are considerable swamps, covered with thick willow underbrush. On Monday last about 7 o'clock, Anthony Orr left the house for a neighbors. The farm boy, James Allison, left the house about the same time, going to the Barrie farm with the cows. A little girl, the daughter, aged 11 years, was sleeping in the room upstairs.

A WEEK'S SEARCH BEGINS.

When Mr. Orr returned, Allison was waiting for him at the gate and told him that his wife was missing. Orr instituted a search around the farm, and then went to inform the neighbors. They turned out to assist Mr. Orr, and made a thorough search of the swamps, but without finding any trace of the missing woman.

The little girl told a story that when she woke up she went to a window on the upper flat, and looking out, saw her mother crossing the fields in a northerly direction. In the light of recent developments, however, this story could not be correct.

The farm hand, Allison, denied knowing anything about the disappearance, and when he returned home from Barrie farm he found Mrs. Orr gone. Mr. Orr himself is a nervous man, and for a time was in a frantic state over the disappearance of his wife.

HER PREVIOUS CHARACTER

While in some quarters the belief was that Mrs. Orr had committed suicide, the most general belief was that she had deserted her husband, and gone away with some one else, and the previous history of Mrs. Orr gave some grounds for the belief. She did not always get on well with her husband, and four years ago, eloped with a man named Mulholland, who was employed as a laborer on the Orr farm. At that time Mrs. Orr took a quantity of her husband's property with her, so a warrant was sworn out and the couple were arrested in a hotel at St. Catharines by Chief of Police Ahern of Galt.

Mr. Orr took his wife back and forgave her, but since then her name has been mentioned in connection with several residents of Galt, and two of them prominently.

The theory of desertion however was weakened by the manner in which Mrs. Orr had disappeared. She was milking the cows when Anthony Orr left the house, and had on a old dress and slippers. In searching the house it was noticed that she had taken no ring with her. All her clothes were untouched, some dresses she had been making were lying around in an unfinished condition, her gold watch, jewelry, and even a purse containing a small sum of money were all left behind.

ON BAD TERMS WITH THE FAMILY.

Her husband and others believed that the woman had committed suicide, and gave as a reason for it the unfriendly relations that existed between Mr. Orr and others of the Orr family. The female members of the family would have little to do with Mrs. Orr, and on Sunday last, when she attended the funeral of the late Andrew Orr, father of her husband, she complained she was not treated kindly by the members of the family. She then made the remark to her husband: "I am of no use here; I guess I will get out of it."

For three days parties with dogs scoured the swamps in the neighborhood, but on Wednesday last a sensation was created by the discovery of what was evidently intended for a grave. This was found in a swamp about 200 yards south of the house. A few yards from the grave was found hidden in some thick underbrush a spade belonging to Mr. Orr, and which had been taken from the barn. The grave was nearly six feet long, two feet deep, and 18 inches wide, and was dug at a spot where discovery would be difficult.

ALLISON'S STRANGE TALE.

With the discovery of the grave came a confession from James Allison, the farm hand, of a conversation he had with Mr. Orr the morning she disappeared. Allison stated that Mrs. Orr had asked him to show her his gun, and enquired how it was used. He explained the working of the weapon, and she told him to put it back in its place. When questioned as to why he had not told this before, Allison said he was afraid, that Mrs. Orr had threatened to kill him if he said anything about it. When Mrs. Orr disappeared the gun was also missing, and the belief then was that in a moment of despondency she had taken the gun, gone to the swamp and shot herself.

Several neighbors said they had heard a gunshot that morning about the time Mrs. Orr disappeared. Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Orr of Galt, and Mr. John Orr and his daughter, who occupied the

The New Story—The Fly Gets The Spider

Samuel Simon Sr., a well known resident of Neeshanook township, while strolling near his home one day recently, noticed a fly about half an inch long and of a dark blue color, with a slim body, bearing a large dead spider. The fly crossed his path and laid his load down. It then went about eighteen inches in another direction and commenced digging a hole in the ground. Simons curiosity being excited, he stopped and watched the work. After the fly had the hole dug about half the length of himself he went to where he had left the spider and took its dimensions. After going back to the hole he found that it was not big enough and commenced digging again. After taking out a quantity of earth he again went to the spider and again took his dimensions. He did this eight times and as often enlarged the hole. When the busy little fellow had the hole too deep for him to throw the earth out he would go on the bank and force it back with his feet. After he had the excavation large enough for this purpose he went for the spider and brought it to the grave, for such it proved to be, and dragged it to the mouth of the hole. After he had the body in he covered it with fine earth first and finished by placing a small piece of cinder on the top. When he had finished the work he flew away. The whole time consumed was exactly fifty-five minutes, as Mr. Simon says he sat and watched the whole performance.

THE BODY FOUND.

Shortly after 10 o'clock on Monday morning John Orr, and others of a search party, were returning through the corn patch in rear of the house when Mr. John Orr noticed that the earth in one of the furrows was slightly raised. He poked his stick down, and there, with about six inches of sand covering it, was found the body of Mrs. Orr.

The head had been crushed in by some blunt instrument. The body was lying in the grave face downward, the head pointing to the south. The hands were pulled back over the hips, and the feet were crowded into the grave, which had been made about six inches too short, and could have been dug in a few minutes.

NEAR THE HOUSE.

The grave was not more than 30 yards from the house, and just along and outside the fence of the garden. Opposite where the grave was a picket was torn out of the fence, as if the body had been dragged through the potato patch. There were no traces of any struggle in the garden, but these would be easily obliterated, rains having fallen since the murder, and besides the garden was all torn up by the search parties.

In view of the discovery of the body, the unused grave in the swamp became of additional significance. Whoever murdered Mrs. Orr must have buried her in the garden as a temporary resort, and then dug the grave in the swamp, intending to remove the body at a later period.

Coroner Radford opened an inquest, which was adjourned until Wednesday.

TREVELYAN'S STORY.

Trevelyan was a frequent visitor at the Orr farm, and Mr. Anthony Orr had on the Friday before Mrs. Orr disappeared told Trevelyan that he did not want him around the premises. Trevelyan has a rather curious history. His first name was Alfred Andrews, but his mother marrying again, he took the name of his second father. Seventeen years ago he worked here for John Orr, but since that time he has not been in Galt until the latter end of June, when he stated that he was studying medicine at McGill College in Montreal. He told a story of a wealthy man who had adopted him, but who had died, and whose widow was said, paying the expenses of his education.

NEIGHBORS TALKED.

On returning to Galt he resumed his old acquaintance with the Orr family and was a frequent visitor at the farm. Mr. Anthony Orr makes a statement regarding his conversation with Trevelyan. He states that on Friday, Aug. 6, Trevelyan came to the farm, and he accused him of giving drugs to his wife. He also said that the neighbors were complaining, and that he did not want Trevelyan to call at the farm in the future.

Mr. John Orr said that on a recent occasion when Trevelyan was going to visit Anthony Orr's farm he stopped and had a chat with John. Trevelyan carried a satchel, which he opened and showed to John Orr. It contained some drugs and instruments, and Trevelyan explained that he was taking them over to show Mrs. Orr.

HIS LAST VISIT.

"I met Mrs. Orr on Wednesday, August 4, and she asked me to come up and get some cherries. I asked her if I would come up on Thursday and she said no, that she would have company there, to come up on Friday. I went there on Friday morning and saw Mrs. Orr. I went with the little girl to pick cherries, but did not pick them, as they were not good. Mrs. Orr told me not to go away and say that I had got nothing, and she gave me a basket of apples. As I was going away I went to see Tony Orr, who was in the potato patch. Tony referred to the funeral of his father, and said that his wife would not go and did not want him to go, but that he proposed to go present, and that his wife would have to go along. I remarked that death should settle all quarrels, and then Tony said he had another matter to refer to. There had been a great deal of talk, he said, about my visit to the farm, and of the visits of Harry Blair, and it was not pleasant to have remarks made about one's wife. I told him I only came to them, as they were old friends, and not to see his wife."

He denied having given Mrs. Orr drugs, and as regards John Orr's statement about the instruments, he said "the box of instruments referred to was only a book."

Mr. Trevelyan has engaged W. D. Card to look after his interests, and the latter states that he will be able to fully account for Mr. Trevelyan's movements on the day the murder was committed.

THE FARM HAND.

The farm hand, James Allison, was also placed under arrest, as the authorities are by no means satisfied with his story about the gun.

Allison is a thick set young fellow with a stupid countenance. He had been working for Orr since the spring. Harry Blair, an agricultural implement dealer here, made this statement:—"On Saturday, the 7th, I was at the Orr farm, and made arrangements to call on Monday and get some butter. On Monday I went there about 11 o'clock, and Mrs. Tony Orr, was missing. We made a search but could not find her, and then Tony left me in charge of the house and went to alarm the neighbors. The little girl was there and brought me a gold watch, saying 'Here is mamma's watch, I took it, but gave it to Tony Orr' in the afternoon. All my relations with the family were simply as a friend. I had helped them out of trouble several times."

The Popular Medicine With the People and the Medical Profession.

Only a truly great and effective remedy could continue, as Paine's Celery Compound has done, to hold its high places in the estimation of the ablest physicians and of the tens of thousands of busy men and women whose only means of judging is from the actual results in their own homes or among their friends. No remedy was ever so highly recommended, because no other ever achieved so many grand victories over disease and sickness.

For feeding exhausted nerves, building up the strength of the body, giving a natural and healthy appetite, and as a promoter of refreshing sleep, Paine's Celery Compound stands to day without an equal in the world.

Mrs. Garland, 675 Crawford St., Toronto, gives her experience with the world's best medicine as follows:

"I feel Paine's Celery Compound has done for me what I have been unable to do for myself. Before using it my appetite was poor—almost gone; I was also weak and debilitated, and suffered from pains in the head."

"Paine's Celery Compound does all that is claimed for it. I have recommended it to my friends, and they all speak highly of the results received from it. I wish Paine's Celery Compound the success it so richly deserves."

Beans in Wet Seasons.

The season so far has been unusually wet, and as it injures beans to cultivate among them, while either the soil or the leaves are wet, it is likely there will be many weedy bean fields and a light crop. A little mud on the leaf of a bean is likely to cause rust, while if it falls on a blossom, that blossom is thereafter blighted. It is for this reason that beans in a wet season do best on gravelly soil, though the crop is one which phosphate greatly benefits.
