Bell, the man who stole the horse from Mr Darlington farmer, was let off last week at Cobourg, on suspended sentence, but has since been arrested again, on information received through Chief Jarvis, for stealing another horse in June, 1896, at Emsdale, in the Parry Sound district. He has been fully identified and is now in Parry Sound jail, awaiting his trial.

On Thursday evening last, one of the slickest tongued sharpeners that we have heard for a long time, held forth on the market square, selling corn cure and electric belts. Neither article was any good whatever, but after giving some of the first purchasers their money back and also throwing away a few quarters and dimes to the boys, he succeeded in fleecing some two score of his audience out of $1 and $2 each.

Among the bitten ones were civic officials, lawyers, doctors, business men, mechanics, and laboring men. After making a good haul he announced that the performance would close, and also stated that if it was not that he had a slight cold he would sing that well known ditty, "Just tell them that you saw me," and drove off leaving his victims gaping at one another. The corn cure was a small bottle of colored water and the electric belts were worth about 25c. a doz. Many of the purchasers borrowed the $1 to invest. We learn that at Napanee he was mobbed and had to run for it.—News.
