Threshing is the order of the day in this locality. There is a superabundance of straw but Mrs S Westney for a week or so, also a fair yield of grain.

Inspector McBrien visited our school on Wednesday and left a very favorable report of the condition of the school.

There is a class of people, though we are pleased to say it is small, who are never more delighted than when they are indulging in coarse and malicious jokes at the expense of others. They live in a little shell called self, and from it they look out over the world as a spider looks out over his web, ever ready to pounce upon some unfortunate wayfarer and make him a victim to their ignominious devices. It is contrary to the best laws of morality to return evil for evil : the antiquated doctrine of "an eye for an Corks. Etc. eye" and "a touth for a touth" has already sunk into oblivion in the minds of the best thinking people. But what shall we say of the inhuman wretch who dares to intrude on the peaceful and innocent life of the man who envies no one, and in the truest sense of the word, "lives and lets live"? All true hearted people say he is the meanest of mortals, and should receive such punishment as will bring him to his senses. Someone of the character which I have hinted passed our way the other day. He had evident- gradually wearing away. ly become disgusted with a half ripe apple he ONTARIO. had partly devoured and as the school-house window was near by he disposed of the remainder of his truit by dashing it through one of the panes. We have no doubt a chuckle of satisfaction passed his lips as he heard the flinty pane fly into a thousand pieces, and saw the gaping hole, which he, by his own skill and dexterity, had made. Little did he think or care about the little barefooted urehin who next day might cut their feet and cripple themselves with the broken glass. Little did he care for the beauty of our school, the present home of the rising generation. To be short he neither thought of nor cared for anything or anybody
