DOES IT NEED REPAIRING?

DOES IT KEEP GOOD TIME?

Sures where it was. Suffice to say that in his collection of bric-a-brac one may notice a weather bootle, full of precious jewels which had adorned the persons of kings and queens in all past ages. Item No. 3—Mr. James Hopley is one of the most industrious and thrifty tenant farmers in East Whitby, and is a direct descendant of Adam and Eve. His forefathers have thus lived during every preceding period of the world's existence. Mr. Hopley has gathered round him a fine assortment of live stock and implements, and has several sons who are good workers. He lately applied to Mr. Thomas Constable to lease one of his very large farms, comprising sixty-five acres, and after Mr. Tonant had inspected the Hopley outfit he granted him a lease for two years, feeling that a family of such lineage and so much fine farm property would certainly be good for a two years rental. One of Mr. Hopley's boys is now furrowing the soil of the farm in question, preparing for the crop of 1897. The Hopley family is just such a one as Mr. Tonant likes for his farms.

A runaway which might have been attended with serious results occurred on King-st. last Thursday evening. Rev Mr McLaren, wife and child, of Columbus, were driving along when the horse began to run to the west and slipped on the railway track and fell. The occupants of the rig were pretty badly shaken up, but no serious damage resulted.

A tramp who had previously been at Whitby soliciting money arrived here on Friday last. His plan was to ask the lady of the house for money and if she refused him he consigned her to that lower region from whence no traveler returns. Chief Constable Hoover heard of the fellows operations and brought him before Police Murton, who sent him to jail for a month.
On Sunday Mrs E. Edmondson received a card from Miss Ste Marie, stating that her brother, Mr Young of that place was seriously ill. A few minutes later she received a telegram of his death. Mrs Edmondson has the sympathy of her many friends here.

The Vindicator announces that the mill race is private property and suggests properly that it should not be used as a sewer. We might also suggest that our streets be not used as dumping grounds for wrapping papers, shoe boxes, etc. Then too we often see merchants taking their rubbish on the streets to dump it. If they are not fortunate enough to have a back yard in which to build bon fire, why not have a large box in which to dump their refuse, and have a boy wheel it to a vacant lot and burn. In fact, a by-law prohibiting the burning of rubbish on the streets is likely to cause accidents by frightening horses.

The Rev Mr McLaren of Blenheim occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian church both morning and evening on Sunday last.

The Vindicator prints another hot column this week on the controversy over the attempted removal of the post office, and among other things says that the general feeling now is that the office will be carried on where it is at present.
It is rumored that a movement is on foot to construct an electric railway from Oshawa to Toronto, equipped to carry passengers and farm produce to the city. The promoters aim to interest prominent men in the municipalities along the route in the enterprise and induce them to become stockholders. It is the intention to have freight cars which will take live stock to the Toronto market on foot, and also eggs, etc. Oshawa is to be the eastern terminus, so that this will be the point to which produce from the north and east will gravitate.
The outline of the scheme only has been confided to us. We are not in a position to state whether any stock has been subscribed or not, but the scheme is on foot and even if this one does not go through it is only a matter of time before the line will be built, but it may be pushed through from Toronto.
A. Dose of his own Medicine
The Vindicator makes a loud howl because the Reformer of last week printed an anonymous letter from Raglan pitching into the editor of the Vindicator in very strong language. Bro Nicholson says the obvious malice of the writer renders the attack harmless, but goes on to score the Reformer for allowing a hidden slanderer to have the use of his columns to pitch into people. Mr Nicholson winds up by observing that "the Vindicator has its faults, but was never charged with having placed its columns at the disposal of the slanderer." Well, we would like to have Mr Nicholson look over his back files for three years and note how many times he has sheltered hidden slanderers while they poured their violence upon the editor of the CHRONICLE. Let us take the columns of both the Oshawa papers been open to any wretch who felt like flinging fifth at us from a safe hiding place? Why should the Vindicator man squeal so when treated to a dose of his own medicine? The Vindicator winds up its little complaint by stating that it refused publication of a letter of personalities even when the writer offered to sign the same. It is safe to say that letter was not an onslaught upon the editor of the Vindicator. Further, we venture to say that the letter would have been published if no customer of the Vindicator was ever published in the benevolent object and wishes through modesty to avoid becoming prominent. The Oshawa papers have always been open to all sorts of dirty stabbing, and it is high time that editors like Messrs Nicholson and Mundy found out that people will hold them in contempt as men so long as they shelter dirt skunks behind their editorial doors. No man can afford to be the protector of a detestable coward who stabs people in the back. An editor who will shield an anonymous slanderer is mean enough to write the anonymous fifth himself, and should be blamed for writing such letters in every case.

Items from the Oshawa Papers
Mr Thos Constant has received from the polar regions a piece of timber split off the north pole. The pole appears to be made of spruce wood, and on the chunk sent to Mr Constant is carved "William de Conat," the original family name. Underneath the date "1621," which proved that the original Conat visited the pole on his way to America. The curiosity was mailed from Circle City by Prof. Andree who was returning from the pole on his balloon trip. A letter from the north pole aeronaut states that Wm de Conat is the only man who has his name inscribed upon the pole, and is probably the first and only great traveler who ever reached that vicinity until Prof. Andree did his balloon trick. It will be seen from this Mr Thos Constant is not only a famous explorer, but is the descendant of a line of famous travelers. Item No. 2—We read a good deal in the papers nowadays about hidden gold treasures, but a well known gentleman in our town, who is far-famed as a wealthy traveler, philanthropist and literary, frequently entertains his friends with a story of glittering wealth which makes the riches of the Klondike fade into a mere jewelry business. Our townsman, on traveling with his retinue in Ashabad, having procured a passport and a guard of a hundred soldiers from the Sultan, as the king of that land is called, was on one evening on a river bank where Julius Caesar had over 3000 years previously pitched his tents the night before his famous battle with Alexander the Great. Caesar had been on a campaign of conquest and had captured so much gold and precious stones that 4000 ships were being built on the Clyde to carry it all to Rome. Tradition was all that there was to prove the famous camping ground, as both Caesar and Alexander and their armies were slaughtered. Being short of water for his men, and believing this was the place where Caesar had put away the trinkets and coins, the great traveler sent his soldiers and retinue to search for water. When he found a hole in the river to fish what he sunk a hole in search of water. What he found, he could never be estimated, and may never come to light as our friend already had more riches than he wanted, and left the hidden treasures
