BOOTH'S

Oscillating Truss.

An entirely new and scientific invention.

We claim the following advantages for this truss: I.-It is light, weighing from four to five ounces, according to size. 2.-It is neat and clean, because the materials used in its construction cannot absorb the perspiration. 3.-It is easy to wear, because of the novel way in which the pad is made to 4.—It never leaves the position in which it is placed on the body, because the pads occupy soft places, 5.-It does its work perfectly, because the proper positions of pads can be secured with every truss.

6.-The truss is made to fit the wearer, no the man to fit the truss. 7.-It is the laborer's truss, because he can adjust it to a strong pressure for extra hard work, and can change it again to an easy pressure in a minute.

Trip to Kingston. There are not many people who select Kingston as the objective point of a trip and the most of those who do are compelled to stay there so long that it would require a book to record a trip instead of a column. It had long been understood that the editor of this great moral newspaper was to accompany the Osgoode football team when it made its annual trip to Kingston to play Queens University and the presence of our old friend W C Michell on the team was an additional inducement to go. (Besides this, there was a cheap railway rate, of course. There was a special train through here at 10.30 Friday night and on this a large majority of the excursionists travelled, the players having a pulman. The enthusiasts consisted of admirers of the game and of the team and a number of people who went to Kingston to visit their relatives who were residing in the penitentury. Of the latter class we shall speak further along. It was a midnight trip, and as it was a special train there were no stops at places where one could get off to stretch his legs, so those who brought no metheglin along had to go-dry all the way.
