Salt.

A Few of the Very Many Household Uses of This Article.

Colored cotton fabrics will not fade by subsequent washings, if placed in boiling water to which has been added three gills of salt to every four quarts of water. Do not remove the cloth until the water is cold.

Window glass, lamps, marble and stone vases or mantels are quickly cleaned if rubbed with salt slightly dampened. A teaspoonful of salt in a coal oil lamp makes the wick burn brighter and give a clearer light.

Fresh ink stains on carpets or tablecloths can be removed by repeated applications of dry salt. Carpets are freshened and colors brightened if wiped with clean cloth wrung from salt water. Coarse salt sprinkled occasionally around the edge of carpets is a moth-destroyer.

Ink spots are removed from gingham by saturating them with sweet milk then covering with salt. Salt and lemon juice will remove mildew. Soak brooms occasionally in hot salt water; they will be softer, less brittle, and will wear longer.

Heat salt ten minutes in a very hot oven. Crush fine and sift through a wire sieve. Store in a covered box in a dry place, and it will not cake. This is preferable to mixing cornstarch with it, which thickens delicate dressings and soups.

Bedroom floors may be kept cool and fresh by wiping them daily with strong salt water. Microbes, moths and other insect pests are thus destroyed. Salt and ammonia in cold water is an excellent disinfectant in bedrooms.

Cleanse rattan, bamboo and willow work with a bush and salt water, then rub dry with a soft cloth. Floor matting will be more durable and less brittle if occasionally washed with salt water. Wash chamber ware with cold salt water instead of warm soapy water.

To remove egg stains from silver, rub gently with a damp cloth sprinkled with fine salt. Salt on the hands will prevent fowls and fish from slipping during the process of dressing. Salt dissolved in alcohol or ammonia will remove grease spots.

An excellent application for a sprain is the well-beaten whites of three eggs mixed with three scant tablespoonfuls of salt. A plaster of the yolk of an egg thickened with salt applied to the sore of acute pain will often relieve.

Add salt to the water in which black cotton goods are washed to prevent fading and turning brown. Rub rough flat irons over paper sprinkled thickly with salt. Lemon juice and salt will remove stains from the hands. Do not use soap immediately thereafter.

When rank vegetables, cabbage, onions etc., or fish, have been cooked, to prevent odors from clinging to pot or pan, put a little salt on a hot stove and invert the vessel over it a few minutes. Stains on table ware and tea discolorations are removed with damp salt.

How Jane Struggled With Grammar.

Little Jane had been repeatedly reproved for doing violence to the moods and tenses of the verb "to be." She would say, "I be" instead of "I am," and for a time it seemed as if no one could prevent it. Finally Aunt Kate made a rule not to answer an incorrect question, but to wait until it was corrected.

One day the two sat together, Aunt Kate busy with embroidery and little Jane over her doll. Presently doll society became tedious, and the child's attention was attracted to the embroidery frame.

"Aunt Kate," said she "please tell me what that is going to be?"

But Aunt Kate was counting, and did not answer.

Fatal word "be"—it was her old enemy, and to it alone could the child ascribe the silence that followed.

"Aunt Kate," she persisted, with an honest attempt to correct her mistake, "please tell me what this is going to be?"

Aunt Kate sat silently counting, though her lip curled with amusement.

Jane sighed, but made another patient effort. "Will you please tell me what this is going to be?"

Aunt Kate counted on, perhaps by this time actuated by a wicked desire to know what would come next.

The little girl gathered her energies for one last and great effort and said, "Aunt Kate, what am that going to be?"

In the Animal Kingdom.

The Duration of Life Varies According to Circumstances.

Among the long lived in the animal kingdom we may mention birds, fish and reptiles, although even in the lower animals the duration of life varies immensely, according to the species. Of fish, the carp are especially long lived.

Among birds, some of the parrot species are supposed to live over 100 years. The swan, the raven, the eagle, are also credited with great length of life.

In the mammalia, the elephant attains the greatest age. It grows for 25 to 30 years and is said to live from 100 to 150 years and even longer. We have no accurate means of ascertaining the whale's age. A lion is said to have lived 70 years in the Tower, but there is no evidence that he attains anything like that age in the natural state. Forty years is recorded by naturalists as the extreme age. The camel may attain the age of 50. It eats little and drinks less. The horse is comparatively a short lived animal, but it is a well known fact that when he does little work and passes the greater part of his days in pasture he may attain to about 40 years of life, but when a horse is hard worked and fed, moreover, upon beans, oats and other ossifying foods his days are much shorter.

In the vegetable kingdom the yew attacks great age. Those at Fontaine Abbey are about 1,200 years old. Two orange trees at Rome, planted respectively by St. Dominic and Thomas Aquinas, are said to be from 500 to 600 years old, and there are records of tropical trees that, counting by their rings, are supposed to have attained the age of 800 to 1,000 years.

Clean Cows Milk.

It is a terrible thought, nevertheless a true one, that if the cows milked to babies were only clean, thousands and thousands of little lives would be spared each year. But the milk in the majority of cases, is not clean. To this fact is largely due the enormous death rate among children thus artificially fed. The uncleanliness begins with the process of milking and continues until the milk is swallowed as food. Is it not strange that such a simple lesson of cleanliness cannot be learned? How many of those who do the milking take the trouble to thoroughly cleanse the hands before engaging in that process? How often is the udder of the cow carefully washed before milking? Yet these cleansing processes should be rightly insisted upon.

Germs cannot be removed from a liquid by running it through a sieve, no matter how fine its meshes may be. Indeed, the question should not be how to get the germs out, but rather how to keep them from getting in.

Who does not know women and young girls who are continually in tears? Who always weeps at the sight of a clean white dress? Who has frequent fits of melancholy without any apparent cause? The intelligent physician will know that it is some derangement of the complicated and delicate feminine organs. The young girl suffers, bodily and mentally, in silence. There is undue weariness, unexpected pain, unreasonable fears and fits of temper. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription exerts a wonderful power over women's delicate organism. It is an invigorating tonic and is specific for the peculiar weaknesses, irregularities and painful derangements of woman. Careless, easy going doctors frequently treat their women patients for biliousness, nervousness, dyspepsia, liver or kidney troubles, when the real sickness is in the organs distinctly feminine, and no help can come until they are made perfectly strong by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Funny Things.

Mildred—Why have you taken such a dislike to Charley Spattlight?
Gertrude—Oh, he so small about some things.

Mildred—I don't understand what you mean.
Gertrude—Why, you know we got engaged at the seaside and I had hardly given him to understand, upon returning to town, that it was all off, before he began hinting that he wanted his ring back.

Goodness gracious! Did you know that Maude was engaged to marry one of those princes over in Europe?
Oh, yes. She wrote and told me all about it. It wasn't love or infatuation for a title that drove her to it, but she had bought so much stuff abroad that it was cheaper to marry the prince and stay there than it was to pay the customs duties.

Liquid Fertilizers for Flowers.

Liquid fertilizers are never failing renovations, and some kind or other is within the reach of all. A few drops of household ammonia in a pitcher of water are not lost on indifferent plants. A weekly application of soapuds is recommended. Commercial plant food is good but in some respects is not equal to barnyard manure, although cleaner and easier to handle.

A few table-salt bags filled with various manures securely tied, a pail and an old dipper, are the essentials and can be tucked away in an obscure corner of the back porch or shed, ready for hot water on the bags in the watering pot and the soluble parts will be leached out. Five or even ten pound bags are good size for a pail of water; and the cloth is just coarse enough for a strainer, keeping back fine straw and litter which might otherwise clog the watering pot.

Hen manure is of great value, but must be used judiciously, for the percentage of lime in its composition is larger than that of any other given analysis. Dove manure is even better, for it contains more organic matter, nearly as much nitrogen and a third less lime, which makes it safer to use. Sheep manure has also been known to produce marvelous growth, which may be attributed to the unusual amount of organic matter it contains. Cow manure is, perhaps, safest and best of all for general use, if it contains all things in moderation.

The Man, the Wife, the Dress.

A man stood in the middle of an aisle in a Broadway dry goods store one day last week. He looked disconsolate. At a nearby counter his wife was making purchases. Suddenly the man's face lightened up and he took a step forward and extended his hand to another man who had appeared around a counter.

"Hello!" he exclaimed, "has your wife brought you to this, too?"

"Yes," said the other man. "I told her she could have a new dress, and nothing would do but I must come and pick out all the material. She's done all the selecting so far, and the only time I made an objection I got sat on."

"Say," said the first man assuming a confidential air, "you've been married five years and I've been married only one. Now just tell me if anything like this ever happened to you. My wife wanted a dress, a kind of potato sack stuff, which is transparent enough to make it worth while to put expensive silk under it. She bought all the material and a lot of ribbons. Then she hired a dressmaker and for two days they've been at it. This morning my wife said to me: 'You must come down to the store with me this morning. We underestimated a little on my dress and must get some more ribbon.' I came, and the first thing she did was to buy eighty yards of black, white and green ribbon. It took my breath away. When I recovered I said: 'Did you underestimate that much?' 'Oh, that's not all,' she said. 'We must get twelve yards more of black braid and three yards of taffeta,' that's silk, you know. Well, I got into an argument with her, maintaining that it was impossible for anybody to underestimate eighty yards on ribbon, let alone the other things. She just gave me a look and said: 'Oh, you need't pay for it, mother will.' Now, isn't it absurd for anybody to say that she underestimated eighty yards of ribbon?"

"It does seem foolish," said the other man, "but for heavens sake when the dress is done don't say you can imagine where all the ribbon is. You can bet it's all there."

No Beauty.

Some years ago there was a family positively famous for its ugliness. It was of so pronounced a type that the male portion of the family not only knew it, but appeared to be proud of it.

One of the race was once admiring his eldest son, and congratulated him on being the ugliest of the tribe.

"Don't lose your position," said he to the young man. "If ever you meet a man uglier than yourself, shoot him."

The son promised he would. Some years after that he was wandering with his gun on the Yorkshire moors, when he met a tourist botanizing. He was at once startled by the man's appearance. As soon as he recovered his self-possession, he went up to the botanist and said:—

"Sir, I must shoot you."

There was no other human being in sight, and naturally the man addressed was alarmed. But thinking to humor the madman, as he took him to be, he said jocularly:—

"Shoot me, my friend? What have I done?"

The other replied gravely:—

"Nothing. Only I promised my father that if ever I met a man uglier than myself, I would shoot him."

The stranger took a steady look at him, and said slowly:—

"Am I really uglier than you?"

"There is no doubt about it."

"Then shoot me. I don't want to live any longer."
