So I shall continue gladly in the ranks of the "minority" of bigots and "do-gooders" who desire that increasing the profits of the trade is anything but the decrease of public good.

Chess Game In Europe

By Lewis Milligan

"Peaceful co-existence" is an ideal that should appeal to all reasonable nations, and Mr. Khrushchev's consistent desire that one should be heartily supported. He could begin by setting an example of his ideal right at home with his next-door neighbors, — Poland, Lithuania, Estonia, Hungary, Rumania, and Bulgaria. He might claim that he is existing in peace with those countries; but it is not co-existence, for as nations they have no existence. At the close of the Second World War the Allies agreed to a co-occupation of Eastern Europe pending the conclusion of a peace treaty, which was to release those countries from occupation and ensure the whole of Europe against future aggression and domination by Germany or any other power.

On those conditions Soviet Russia joined in the formation of the United Nations, the purpose of which was to establish international peaceful co-existence. But Stalin used the U.N. as a platform for communist propaganda. He ignored his obligations entered into at Yalta. Instead of withdrawing from the occupied countries in Eastern Europe, he incorporated them into the Soviet empire. And now Mr. Khrushchev, who denounced the ruthless acts of Stalin, insists that Russian annexation of Eastern Europe should be regarded as a permanent status quo in any peaceful co-existence settlement.

That is historically typical of the craft and cunning of Russian diplomacy. The Russians are said to excel all other people in two things; one is the game of chess, and the other mathematics. The latter is proved by their outstanding success in space navigation, which enabled them to encircle the moon with perfect accuracy. And the Soviet leaders have in recent years demonstrated their superiority in the chess game of international diplomacy. Every move or refusal to move was calculated with mathematical precision. Stalin knew exactly what he was doing when he made a quick pact with Hitler at the outbreak of the last world war. Then, when Hitler moved in an attack on Russia, Stalin checked him by switching his pact to the western allies.

How Stalin used and abused his craft, particularly in bringing about the deadlock in Berlin and the whole of Eastern Europe, is a well-known matter of recent history. Khrushchev has inherited that situation and he has declared his intention of defending it with long-range nuclear missiles. He does not need small arms any more and has offered us the choice between peaceful co-existence and no existence. And now he is sitting back and saying, "It's your move." But we don't have to move right away. It would be wise to keep him waiting, there may be some reason at home for his hurry.

Lions Learn of Oil's Future From Imperial Oil Speaker

An informative address on "Oil and the Road Ahead" was given by Maurice W. Crompton, Toronto, at the dinner meeting of the Lions Club in the Lions Community Centre on Monday evening, Feb. 8.

Hockey Draw Winners
The Club celebrated the birth of Dr. R. E. Dinniwell. The winners of the hockey draw were: Saturday, February 13th, Joe Flett, Jim Bell; Wednesday, February 17th, Keith Shackleton, Howard Wood; Saturday, February 20th, Jack Keegan, M. Thompson; Wednesday, February 24th, Brian Hamilton, Mary Jones; Saturday, February 27th, Steve Smegal, Don Mason; Wednesday, March 9th, Ralph McIntyre, Ralph Kelly; Saturday, March 12th, K. Castle, Murray Larmer, Saturday March 19th, R. Gosselin and Norman Scott.

Good For 260 Years
"It is estimated that there is still a sufficient supply of Canadian crude oil in the ground to last 260 years at the rate it is now being used. If the Athabaskan area is developed, it is estimated the crude oil supply will last for 400 years."

Cannot Be Pessimistic
"One cannot be pessimistic in predicting the oil producing possibilities. Forecasting the findings of oil can have its risks as according to reports we will have about 10,000,000 more people in Canada in 1980, and three times more cars on the roads."

Two Thirds of Demand
"Canadian crude oil now supplies about two thirds of the nation's demand as it is piped from Edmonton to Toronto. The east coast and Montreal are still supplied by foreign sources of oil and natural gas."

With Imperial Oil
Maurice W. Crompton is a member of the Sales Planning and Co-ordination Section of Imperial Oil's Ontario Retail Merchandising Department. Robert Kent said in introducing the guest speaker. He told his fellow Lions that Mr. Crompton had previously been the Ontario Public Relations Field Representative of the company for some years, and this year was transferred to the firm's marketing organization.

"Before joining Imperial Oil Mr. Crompton was head of the National Film Board's Commercial Division. As such he was responsible for the commercial distribution of films not only in Canada, but also in 40 other countries where foreign representatives are maintained," Mr. Kent stated.

He spoke of Mr. Crompton's four years of service in the Air Force during World War II, and added that prior to that he had been engaged in editorial promotion on Maclean's Magazine, and for several years with the Canadian affiliate of the Curtis Publishing Company of Philadelphia.

Married Local Girl
Mr. Crompton's wife is the former Kathleen Storey of Bowmanville, a daughter of Dr. and Mrs. V. Storey. Mr. Kent pointed out, the Cromptons have one son, and four daughters, the youngest born last month.

In discussing the future of the oil industry all developments, no matter how important they are, will be made through chemical research, Mr. Crompton predicted. He spoke of the large oil consumption in this country, and pointed out that in addition to gasoline and heating oil the average person also uses at least 50 other oil products.

Canadians Big Users
Canadians will continue to use oil at a faster rate than the people of any other country except the United States, Mr. Crompton asserted. He spoke of the many oil by-products, and said that some of these include individual synthetic fibres such as those used in clothing, plastic, and polyethylene objects, detergents, and synthetic rubber.

Oil Base For Drugs
The speaker explained that oil is also the base of many different kinds of drugs, and even of some food preparations. He added that it has also been used as a substitute for animals, or plant substances.

1947 Was Big Year
"Until 1947 Canada was a big user, but a small producer of crude oil. The search for oil has been carried on in most of the favorable areas, yet the only important fields discovered until 1947 had been the Turner Valley and Norman Wells."

In February 1947 Imperial Oil's Leduc No. 1 well brought a new oil era to Canada. The Leduc discovery, 134th well in a 25,000,000 acre tract, was the first of a new era in oil production. It was very important, and gave new direction and activity to prospecting and led to the discovery of many more important fields over a large part of the western sedimentary area.

Two Thirds of Demand
"Canadian crude oil now supplies about two thirds of the nation's demand as it is piped from Edmonton to Toronto. The east coast and Montreal are still supplied by foreign sources of oil and natural gas."
