

IMPARTIAL JUSTICE.

About two years ago, during Mr. J. A. Fraser's incumbency as License Inspector for Hamilton, that gentleman was informed that a certain man, a prohibitionist, was making a business of manufacturing cider and selling it within the county.

The natural result of the magistrate's action in this case was the opening of a new market in Hamilton for the sale of cider.

The law, however, according to that interpretation, is a most peculiar one. It makes what is a perfectly legitimate trade when carried on by a prohibitionist in whose success "temperance" men have a friendly or financial interest, an offence punishable by fine or imprisonment when carried on by an anti-prohibitionist.
