A Little Fish Story

A few days agoa travel-stained tramp entered a farmer's house just about au hour previous to dinner. He offered to stove, set him to work at once. dinner time came she called him inside, and having fish for dinner, put one little smelt on his plate, while on her own and her husband's she had nice big ones, reserving more on the platter.
The tramp dubiously lifted his little fish on the fork, held it to his ear and the fish on the fork, held it to his ear and the fish on the fork, held it to his ear and the repeating this about six months ago, but not having heard from him so far I thought I would nak the fish whether he could give me uny tidings.".

"Well, and what did the fish say? asked the farmer's wife.
The tramp answered: "The fish told white.
