for a considerable time excited less sensibility, perhaps, than the premature and unexpected death of her name-sake and grand daughter. This winter it comes through to Kingston. A stage was also attempted last summer between York and the head of the Bay of Quinte. The attempt was new; the the road some part of the way, was bad; and the arrangements were incomplete. When the road shall be put into a better state of repair, we trust there will be good encouragement to support a regular line of Stages to York. A winter stage through the whole route has been undertaken this winter. For such an undertaken the weather has been very unfavorable. We hope, however, it may meet with that success, to which every enterprize for the public accomodation is entitled.

The disputes between these two powers, after a discussion of many years seems to be approaching to a crisis. The Spanish Secretary of State, Mr. Pizarro, in a note to Mr. Erving, the American Ambassador at the American Ambassador at the discussion of many years seems to be return home.

Mr. Bagot, the British minister, is about to return to England, leaving Mr. Antrobus, secretary of the legation, as charge des Madrid, has given formal notice, that the King, his master, has issued orders for the suspension of the negociation between the United States and Spain, until satisfaction shall have been made by the American government to him, for the proceedings of General Jackson in Florida, which he considers acts of unequivocal hostility against him, and outrageous upon his honor and dignity; the only acceptable attonement for which is stated to consist in the disavowal of the acts of the American General thus complained of, the infliction upon him of a suitable punishment for his misconduct, and the restitution of the Posts and territories taken by him from the Spanish authorities, with indemni-

This Grand combinion of sovereigns, assembling by their lamatic Representatives, in a general nigress, to deliberate and decide upon the at interests of Europe, seems to be a reation of the project of Henry the Great, ich in his day, was thought by the other ropean Powers, to whom it was propsed, be visionary and impracticable.

I he province of Upper Canada being new and sparely settled, its geography is pound. Its imperfections, as are susceptible of easy correction, not for the sake of exposure but with a view to practical improvement, is a laudable undertaking.

As this is within the scope of your prospectus, Mr. Editor, I shall, with your leave, occasionally avail myself of a small portion of the Upper Canada Herald, to contribute my mite towards the improvement of our Provincial Geography. At present I shall only notice one circumstance exists.

A taste for reading, however, seems to be spreading through many of our townships. I hope it will be extended, and become general. The will be extended, and become general. The circulation of news-papers will promote it, as a matter of propriety and duty, to enand be promoted by it, in time. These weekdeavour to correct this vulgar error, and

There is a distinction between Towns and Townships. The whole country, so far as it has been surveyed, is laid out into Townships, corresponding in some respects, with the parochial divisions of England, but more uniform and regular in their extent; whereas there are scarcely a dozen Towns in the Province. In the proper geographical language of Upper Canada, a Town, whether laid out as such in the original survey, or subsequently established, is a comparatively small part of the Township to which it belongs; being what our neighbors in the state of New-York would denominate the Village of the Township.—

mong them, as are illiterate and have but little intercourse with the world. Some of them, seem to be so local and limited in their information, as to be hardly sensible that their Townships have proper names a and probably, do not know that there are Townships in an adjoining district having the same numbers with their own; so that a letter directed to a person in one town-ship described by its number, without dis-tinguishing the district, is liable to be transmitted to a wrong place, and perhaps to a person not intended. Several laughable mistakes of this kind are said to have happened. One of them connected with the remittance of a sum of money, is likely to become the subject of a lawsuit. Uncertainty or confusion in the names of places is sometimes a serious evil, and is often attended with ridiculous incidents.

The retention of these numerical Nicknames of townships is a striking exemplification of the force of habit. When the inhabitants who use them are reminded that their language in this particular appears to others unintelligible, they readily acknowledge its impropriety, and admit that town-From the peculiar circumstances, under as they are described in all public proceedings, legal process, deeds and other writings; but add, that they have been so ac-
