Wasing Resolutions.

Wasingsee that the great majority of these the large in their mind an ideal character, and who reing to attain to their own standard, archeroically attempting to carry out the good resolutions conscientiously framed during last December. when we have to retrospect this month as an experience of the stronger armour can we clothe our anticipations have been to lize d. What stronger armour can we clothe our selves with than experience? They may be suffered the stronger armour can we clothe our selves with than experience? They ment draws profit from all things see." The humblest confess to have such a judgment. How much more profit then should we derive from all things when we experience. It we we are to put the blame on peculiar circumstances. As New Yearapproaches our hopes are raised. We long for opportunities to exibit our strength. In our enthusiassan we attempt to control based upon our infallible knowledge of how other people are going to act. Well we hope every one will succeed—we never could. The only one made last year, that "we resolve no more" was boshen, who say, "Human nature is becoming more and more degenerated every year but think rather that it arises from our own misconception of the influence which govern human nature. How more than the series capable of telling exactly what tohers would do. Herein is the difficulty. The same or temptation is not preserves capable of telling exactly what the would do under particular influences? Still many think themselves capable of telling exactly what the would do under particular influences? Still many think themselves capable of telling exactly what the sound moral and religious principles which underlie law, and apprendicted requitation, and in a few weeks or days our resolution becomes so mutitated as to become unrecognizable control and the inner man of our being, thus becoming a law unto ourselves.—Albert Colleg Times.

When the G. T. R. train from Yim.

Huron County Notes.

When the G. T. R. train from Kin-cardine was in Wingham station last Friday morning it struck and killed an old man nsm ad Matthew Storm, whose duty it was to watch the crossing. When struck he was shovelling snow from the rails, and it is supposed he thought himself out of reach of the train. He was struck on the head and his body hurled about thirty feet into a cattle guard. Death must have been instantaneous. He formerly lived in Lordon.
