No stranger with England shall trifle. Our children, our homes, with our sweethearts and wives, We'll guard and protect with the Rifle!

NATIONAL PROSPERITY. - In every experimental science there is a tendency toward perfection. In every human being there is a wish to ameliorate his own condition. These two principles have often sufficed, even when counteracted by great public calamities and by bad institutions, to carry civilziation rapidly forward. No ordinary misfortune, no ordinary mis-government will do so much to make a nation wretched, as the constant progress of physical knowledge and the constant effort of every man to better himself, will do to make a nation prosperous. It has often been found that profuse expenditure, heavy taxation, absurd commercial relations, corrupt tribunals, disastrons wars, seditions, persegreater under the Stuarts than under the Tu- of Music Merchandize at War prices. dors; that, in spite of battles, sieges, and confiscations, it was greater on the day of the Restoration than on the day when the Long Parliament met; that in spite of maladministration, of extravagance, of public bankruptcy, of too costly and unsuccessful wars, of the pestilence and of the fire, it was greater on PRIVATE MEDICAL TREATISE the day of Charles the Second than on the day of his restoration .- Macaulay.
