For married dames, much gayer than they Had long been friends, and so attached at heart That they indeed were seldom seen apart At length it chanced-by some imprudent act From which suspicion guessed a naughty fact-One came to grief; for busy scandal rang The cruel rumour with reientless tongue Her late companion (such her friendship's proof!) Hearing the tale, discreetly kept aloof; Until by chance-as other people meet-One day they came together in the street When thus the angry dame expressed her mind :-" Is this the treatment I had hoped to find? Wit and Humour.

Robert Hall was unhappy in the courtship of Miss Steel. When he was perhaps smarting beneath the disappointment, he went out to tea. The lady of the house said, with no you." "Oh, madam, that's not the slightest try, that he has commenced the above business in consequence; you have plenty of polished the premises brass." His genius for happy retort never OPPOSITE the DURHAM HOTEL, slumbered. Give Hens Meat.

The New England Farmer says "It is not generally understood that the hen, being omniverous, requires, to secure fecundity, a very liberal allowance of meat! When enjoying her liberty, in the fields, pastures or door-yards, the principal part of her sustenance is derived from insects, worms, &c .-She partakes but sparingly at such times of grain, and often the article is supplied, leaves it for the more inviting food which nature supplies her with in her favorite haunts .-Now, if we confine her where the natural propensity for this description of tood can not be gratified, even though we supply the best of grain, and in abundance, she will cease to lay. The privation affects her health, and there will necessarily be an end of profit until this deficiency is supplied. When fresh Hamilton Oct. 14, 1862. meat or fresh fish can not be supplied, the Hollow Horn in Cattle.

In the November number of the Farmer I see "A Kent Farmer" asks for a "sure cure" for "hollow horn" in cattle. As I am no doctor, I can not give him a sure cure, but will tell him of a "sure" preventive, which is said to be better than a cure for disease, viz.: breed the horns off of cattles' heads .-They are unnecessary appendages on domesice animals, and dangerous in many instances "when cattle do congregate together." They contribute nothing to please the free thinker of sound judgment. Their only desirable quality is to please a badly educated eye-everything else pertaining to them forbids the impropriety of battle burthening their | STOVE heads with them; and as the ladies have done transferring them to their own heads they can not be fashionable ornaments, and Can be seen the best assortment of Stoves in therefore any modest cow will refuse to wear them.-Mooly, Clyde, N.
