

A Game of Cards for a Wife.

About eight or nine months since, a man living in the northern part of this city went out into the eastern part of the State to seek his fortune in the new mines of that section, leaving his wife and child here in town. Some seven months ago, a gallant disciple of St. Crispin persuaded the White Pine widow to take up her abode with him in a house which he furnished for her. The new pair lived together for about seven months, when a few days since the genuine husband returned. Of course there was trouble in the camp; but, after some quarrelling, the two men agreed to play a game of seven-up for the woman. The game came off last Saturday night, and the husband won his wife back by just "two points." The man claimed his wife, and the man of leather could not say but that he had fairly won her. The woman preferred the shoemaker, but the husband and winner was determined to have his own. He packed up what furniture they possessed; and last Sunday evening, with all his household he left by the fast freight wagon for California. When the wagon started from North C. street there was quite a scene. A crowd of nearly one hundred persons had collected to see the husband carry away his "stake," and there was much merriment over the affair. The woman cried and wanted to stay with the shoemaker, and the shoemaker cried at parting with the treasure he had lost by not holding enough of "trumps." He asked some of the crowd if they thought he would be arrested if he attempted to take the woman out of the wagon. They told him he had lost her "on the square," and must bear it like a man, so the wagon moved on and soon the fair one was "gone from his gaze."—Virginia (N.Y.) Enterprise.

Stick to one Thing.

However much we may deprecate the old time custom of indenturing apprentices, the system in its practical results operated almost always for the lasting good of the apprentices. Generally, it assured to him a good trade and wholesome discipline that fitted him for success in business. At the present time, very many young men undertake to acquire a trade and after a brief trial abandon it, because there are unpleasant duties to be performed and obstacles to be overcome. They consider themselves accountable to no one, and go and come at the bidding of caprice, or as an unsettled, uneasy mind. The result of this is to send out into the world young men who have not half learned their trades, unstable in character, who drift from post to pillar, and who succeed in nothing but strolling along the highways of life, melancholy wrecks of men. We would earnestly exhort every young man, after he has chosen his vocation, stick to it; don't leave it because hard blows are to be struck or disagreeable work performed. The men who have worked their way up to wealth and usefulness do not belong to the shiftless and unstable class, but may be reckoned among those who took off their coats rolled up their sleeves, conquered their prejudices against labor and manfully bore the heat and burden of the day. Whether upon the worn-out farm where our fathers toiled, diligently striving to bring back the soil to productivity, in the machine-shop or factory, or in the thousand other business places that invite honest toil and skill, let the motto ever be Perseverance and Industry. A young man with good trade or honorable profession, as he goes forth into the world, with his mind made up to stick to his profession, is not obliged to ask for many favors. He will have his way to success, while the unstable and shiftless will grow tired, despair and fail.

Writing for the Press.

An observance of the following rules by those who write articles for publication, will be a great favor to editors and printers:

1. Write with black ink on white paper.
2. Make the pages small—say no longer than commercial note paper.
3. Write on only one side of the paper.
4. Leave ample margin around the writing, for alterations, if needed.
5. Number the pages in proper succession.
6. Write plainly, without regard to beauty.
7. Use no abbreviations which are not to appear in print.
8. Punctuate the manuscript as it should be printed, as neatly as possible.
9. For italics, underline one line; for small capitals, two; for capitals, three.
10. Never interline without the caret (^) to show its place.
11. Take special pains with every letter in proper names.
12. To which may be added rule 12 namely—Write sense.

A thirsty Quaker having stopped to get a pot of beer, and observed that the measure was deficient, asked the landlord how many casks he drew a month. Ten, was the reply. And wouldst thou like to draw eleven, my friend? Yes. Then I will tell thee how; fill thy measure and then draw it.

Julius, s'pose dere am six chickens, and de man sells t're, how many are dere left? What time ob day was it? Why, what de mischief hab dat to do wid de case? A good deal, honey. If it were arter dark dere would be none left; dat is, if you happened to come dat way. Look here, niggab, jest you stop dem personalities.

Certainly, if 'years roll on,' time 'must come round.'

Runaway Marriage.

As Justice Secko was dealing law and justice in the Police Court recently, he looked towards the door, and saw the smiling countenance of Joe Tigwart, his clerk. Leaving the bench for a moment, the judge hastened to the door, and learned from Joe that a runaway couple were in waiting to be released. They were in a great hurry, and wanted the job done instantly. The anxious couple were sent down stairs to the Marshal's office, and the judge proclaimed a recess of five minutes. Hastening down to the bridal chamber, the judge was confronted by a long haired Illinoisian and a blushing dandy. Are you the man who wants to get married? Who are you? I am Knott. You are not? What are you doing here then? Come in to get epiced. I thought you said you was not the man. I am Knott the man; and this is the woman who wants to be tied to the Knott. Explain yourself, your language is too knotty for me. Well, you see Judge, my name is John Knott. O, I see. Hope you are not a hard knot. Not much. I am a pine knot—been pining for this gal for a coon's age. So I opine. What's her cognomen? Her what? Her name? Christina Rosin. Rosina? Well, I suppose you are her beau, and you want to resin the bow. Yes, I am her beau-Knott. I intend to take the rosina from her name and turn it into a Knott. O, you Knotty man! Why didn't you get married at home?

Why do Children Die.

In answer to this question the Medical Recorder holds the following language: "The reason why children die is, because they are not taken care of. From day of birth they are stuffed with food, choked with physic, splashed with water, suffocated in hot rooms, and steamed in bed clothes. So much for indoor. When permitted to breathe a breath of pure air once a week in summer and once or twice during the cold months, only the nose is permitted to peer into daylight. A little later they are sent out with no clothes at all on the parts of the body which most need protection. Bare legs, bare arms, bare necks, girted middles, with an inverted umbrella to collect the air and chill the other parts of the body. A stout strong man goes out in a cold day with gloves and overcoat, woolen stockings, and thick, double-soled brots with cork between and rubbers over. The same day a child of three years old, an infant of flesh and blood and bone and constitution, goes out with boxes as thin as paper, cotton socks, legs uncovered to the knees, neck bare, an exposure which would disable a nurse, kill the mother outright, and make the father an invalid for weeks. And why? To harden them to a mode of dress which they are never expected to practice. To accustom to exposure which a dozen years later would be considered downright tomfoolery. To rear children thus for the slaughter pen, and then lay it to the Lord, is too bad. We don't think the Almighty had any hand in it."

Bathing.

A daily bath for the whole body is not too much. Health may not absolutely require this, but there are few persons who would not be benefited by complete washing of the skin, from head to foot, at least once every day. The feet need washing as much as the head, as perspiration upon them is very abundant. Feet that are cased in wool and leather are not excepted from the necessity of cleaning. Digestion is free when water is applied above the organs of digestion; and the washing of the chest helps one to breathe more freely. Bathing makes the limbs supple, and it opens the muscles to breath from, if such an unscientific statement may be permitted. All will agree that in the second month of summer a daily bath is a luxury not to be omitted. But in winter it is hardly less necessary and the recreation which it brings makes it a luxury even in inclement weather.

A hog got drunk in Covington, Ky., the other day, by eating brandy peaches which had been thrown into the street. The animal went reeling about for an hour or two, behaving, however, as well as most men generally do under similar circumstances. At last he staggered under the wheels of a street car and was killed.

As Gov. Fairchild, of Wisconsin, and a friend were riding by rail from Madison lately, 2 young ladies with their beaux entered the crowded car, and the distinguished gentlemen surrendered their seats to the fair ones. But great was their surprise to see the young men occupy their seats and take their fair companions upon their laps. "By George," said the Governor, "we might have done that."

The proprietor of the Bridgeport, Conn., hotel was bustling about the other morning at ten o'clock with twenty things to do, when some one asked him why he didn't call up his clerk. "I shan't call him as long as I can help it," he replied, "for when he is in bed I know where he is, but after he's up I don't no where to find him."

The telegraph lines in Russia are almost entirely worked by females.
