WINNING HER WAY.

CHAPTER I.

The windows were opened noiselessly; the soft, caressing spring breeze red the fair curls upon the pallid brow and stirred the delicate draperies of a

"Rise, Hegebach," said a full voice, good may come of it?" "God gives and takes away, and we must be resigned."

With those words a tall, well-developed woman of forty approached man who kneeled motionless beside the bed, his arms encircling the rigid form in bitterest anguish. He did not stir; the speaker hastily brushed the tears as well as I!" from her bright intelligent eyes.

"Hegebach, you cannot remain here

He sighed deeply and rose. He was window again. not a young man, and sorrow made "Good-bye, Hegebach; would you ernesses." him appear still older. His eyes rested not like to see the baby?" almost wildly upon the sweet, peaceful | He pressed his brow against the panes | her bright eyes assumed an astonished | sir," said Martin kindly. pillow; then turning abruptly, he left gently rearranged the white napkin With a flush of anger upon her she is unfortunately spoiled enough "He's all right, sir; the Italian condid so, she caressingly stroked the child-like face; then she took the craman carrying the infant, she entered her, at least in the winter, ride in—

She realied to Martin for the kindness he had sheder and bear and b had just left, issued a wail; she hastily carriage drew up at a fine mansion. well; from April on, Elsie will go to "Don't think of it, Dolly," was the answer. "Any one would have done opened the door and entered a small traveling-dress, rushed down the steps "You have the right to decide, mother the same under the circumstances; and the lady's there!" infinitely pretty, but almost too sim- said, "But I could not possibly have enna in the autumn shall we keep The fall state and fall man har been sold with the infant in her arms.

"Lisa's child, Moritz, For God's sake! ting married?" she said suddenly, look-unice to tell him that she had promised to marry Martin. face in the cushions.

pects are not very bright, you poor and the nurse. thing! No mother! And your father acts as if God had afflicted him because ed the sitting-room and examination of the small face tenderly. "how wee "Is that so?" What will she learn the turn. The turn. you are a girl. Why were you not a it is!-Poor, dear Lisa!" And he turn-there? She will grow pale and thin; boy? And they have all left you of ed hastily to the window in order to she will become a nervous puppet: she reflectively at the wee, red face which when that morose old captain proposed You should not have let her go away, was again puckered up into a hun- to her she would still be alive." dred wrinkles, ready for another cry! von Ratenew, taking the child from me to the castle. What can he do with such a baby?"

Two days thereafter, Captain Hegebach's young wife was buried. Her short life was the talk of the entire village, and he who was ignorant of the details, soon learned that she was a I am not sentimental. Your father very poor girl, who had only married the man, who was likewise poor, and many years her senior, in order but she was unsuccessful; maternal

No one had looked for his marriage, upon her handsome boy. for he was an old bachelor. It was the babe! What do you think, shall from authentic sources that Hegebach's marriage had been made in sheer destance at Z—approally the lived at t marriage had been made in sheer desspent at Z—annually, the lived at the castle. She was gentle, quiet, not overout delay. After a few burried ques"Sure it didn't ro months before, received a letter from of Frau von Ratenow although they tions, he desired Dolly to follow him:

"Sure it didn't roll off somewhere?"

"And the boy said 'sure,' and then ber trinkets, and he did not. He then months before, received a letter from his uncle informing him that he did not wish to leave his fortune to a couple of old bachelors, such as his nephaws.

Aunt Lott lived in the world of Posself upon the witness table, her limbs a solemn shake of the head, and was he had group. After a few nurried questions, he desired Dolly to follow him; the giraffe looked again, but it wasn't departed.

"And the boy said 'sure,' and then her trinkets, and he did not. He then departed.

"I waited about five minutes after her limbs a solemn shake of the head, and was he had group." Misse Nightly to the head, and was he had group." Misse Nightly to the head, and was he had group." Misse Nightly to the head group." Misse Nightly to the head group." wish to leave his fortune to a couple of old bachelors, such as his nephews try-in the higher scheres; she read with a solemn shake of the head, and was driven back to the barn.

"I waited about five minutes after driven back to the barn."

"I waited about five minutes after driven back to the barn."

"I waited about five minutes after driven back to the barn." were. Whichever of the two could inform him first of the birth of a legiunon and the more touching and heartstand index to the barn.

"They wondered about this, for it worked at the knots with my teeth, and after a few moments were. Whichever of the two could inform him first of the birth of a legiupon, and the more touching and hearttimate heir should be the preferred one rending the property the more beautiful stand, judge, jury, and barristers bewas the first time the giraffe had ever had them untied. After freeing myletter, and it was rumoured that he Herr von Ratenow. Lott remained at the prisoner's counsel elicited the husband's brother-officers came to pay same room Moritz von Ratenow tore her favour as a disinterested witness. their tribute of respect to the dead, her little daughter, and laid her with When at length she was allowed to go Refuge of my Soul." The widower folthing for the cat to be jealous of!"

"Creat beavened" the cried and her her, took her out of court; and Mrs.

serted; only one carriage with two not take care of her with all my house- "Don't scold her now, Mrs. Lynch," ly been occupied by the frail young speak—she could not; but she nodded to dine sir?" turning to old Lynch. wife, stood a cradle in which lay the energetically and wiped her eyes, and "With the Missus's cousin, Mrs. hands lying idly in her lab, sat beside Moritz brought the cradle unstairs, in the New Street."

Then you had better take Dolly in the read bring the care of the ishment at the resolute still handsome

"Yes," she continued, "Hegebach, she is here, and she must have attention. eyes: "Papa!" played upon a woman's youthful face rooms. I shall take her for her mo-No baby could thrive in these smoky which lay strangely pale and still up- ther's sake, for I am no longer accuson the snowy pillows of a bed; it fan- tomed to little ones. Moritz is twenty." indeed I did not think-" farthest corner of the room, as if it like the child because you will not obtain the Bennewitz estate Man proonly distance to ask you not ask you not you poses God disposes! Who knows what all the stand in awe; her rosy they had no choice but to acquit the "My cousin is to be married next month, madame." "Well, let him marry," was the reoly. If he has the wished-for son, the

"And the child!" he exclaimed with

"It is bad enough, of course! but his upper lip and his complexion as rosy him for trial all the same."

Anyhow Dolly's had a leg she will get on like other girls; she as ever. all day without any food. Come," hust learn to work; she has two strong she added, suppressing a sob, "come, shall we call her?" she continued Hegebach, you have other duties; think calmly. "Shall we name her 'Eliza- astonishment. beth' after her mother?"

He nodded assent and turned to the

"Take the baby, Siethmann; we are ple for a lady of rank. There was no gone to the funeral in this dress. Great house here together?" one in the room, but upon the sofa lay Heavens! what is that?" he cried. He laughed and kissed the hand she tim went home that night feeling hapcountenance, had already taken the drawing nearer her side, 'I will con- said Lynch; "you couldn't have a

"Oh, Heavens!" he exclaimed, as he do not worry; she has just gone to "I think I do, uncle," said Dolly.

"For shame, Moritz." returned Frau nocent." "Wait, just wait," said she, quickly his arms. "For whom should the girl seizing the child, "I will take you with have waited?"-The young man's eyes filled with tears- "I will hear no reproaches. Lisa fulfilled her duties as a wife; now let the subject rest" "Will the little one remain with us?"

"Certainly; where should she go?" "That is kind of you," said he, twining his arms about the stately woman. "Nonsense. Moritz; you know that was inclined to sentimentality, and you have inherited it from him."

love sparkled in her eyes as she gazed

Frau von Ratenow had nursed the reading a pealing the work a black concealing the fact until now. The teryoung mother during her illness, and dress and black apron. for she had rible truth, concerning the clock once after her death she did the honors dearly loved young Fran von Hege- known, however, she had nothing to in the house of mourning; the two wo-bach. In that very room, scarcely a hide, and so came successfully through the ordeal, the fact that she had now. Frau von Hegebach had no parents timidly placed her hand in that of her the ordeal, the fact that she had nevto follow her to the grave, but her middle-aged suitor. And now into that er even seen the prisoner, telling in

The ceremeny was over. The throng the child; I brought her nurse. Sieth- called a piece of her mind. "You have the most time. Lott: take hitherto, began to give Dolly what she bad dispersed; a new mound was mann, with me; you shall not have "Well, Dolly, I wouldn't have beadded to the number in the churchyard much trouble with her. She could not lieved in such wickedness even from the house of mourning was almost de- not smoke cigars, and I, you know, can- you."

Frau von Ratenow entered the can- ed themselves beside it—Aunt Lott in there at once, sir. I'll wait and bring

So the child grew up in the old lin- on the sofa in the parlour behind the den-shaded house. When at two years shop. As Dolly lay there sipping of age she looked out of its windows, her tea, and watching the elaborate of age she looked out of its windows, her tea, and watching the classical manner in which Mrs. Burke's servant, manner in which Mrs. Burke's servant, under the supervision of her mistress, she would take her fingers from her mouth, and pointing in the direction of the City Hall, reply with sparkling

Papa, indeed-a father who scarcely knew his child-who only occasionally paid a visit of duty to the castle, and "Thank you, madame," he murmured, who joyfully ran to meet him, and looked so gloomily at the fair little one "Don't mention it, dear Hegebach, tons on his uniform. She was a strik- particulars of the verdict. "The judge cradle which had been relegated to the I only wished to ask you not to disingly beautiful child, the pet of the charged in his favour; he told the jury

"She must soon go to school," said box.—He may thank Dolly for that." Frau von Ratenow one day as she sat weeks in joil. If the had not moddled the child as she flitted across the with the clock that day, me and her von know what that is in our position home for the Easter vacation, as he have been let off then and there." you know what that is, in our position paced two and fro in a light gray summer suit, an incipient mustache upon The coroner's jury would have sent "To school?" he repeated, pausing in front of his mother. Frau von Ratenow looked at him in at home? There are plenty of gov- according to my reckoning."

From the room opposite the one she The drive was not a long one. The guaranty her a carriage later on very shown her.

"Had I only known it, mother!" he your plans; when you return from Vi- moment's pleasure."

"Yes, I am, dear mother," he replied, course! They let you scream here and hide the tears which sprang to his will never be a healthy wife and mo-She paused and for a moment gazed pause, "if you had not persuaded Lisa, domestic life will fly out of the window. ther; and have you thought of what "You see, mother," ne added, after a she will unlearn; all love of a peaceful, Moritz, if you want her to remain in-enjoyed the rapid drive; but now her only sensation was one of terror at the ordeal before her. At the end of a two hours' drive they began to approach the city. Country seats changed into villa residences, these again until he came to the ball, and then he "Take this to the next house and just a year since he had brought that I give her up to Aunt Lott?"

(To Be Continued.)

CHAPTER V.

Sunbeam into his house to gladden it

"What?" he cried, in surprise; then the added gayly: "Give me the young the court of the court he added gayly; "Give me the young pulled up at the door of the court- seen it roll down into the gutter, he timued.

eight days later with the announce and took possession of two pleasant rooms on the upper floor, which rooms searching cross-examination from the council for Refuge of my Soul." The widower followed the hearse in full uniform; his "Great heavened" she cried and her Lynch, whom nothing short of the set face expressed not grief, but dis-dain and a scornful smile played about pale grave face of Frau von Ratenow. Judge's presence could have restrained

In the bedroom which had so recent- tenderly in her arms. She did not since morning.—Where are you going fused sound of cheering was heard in

"It's the foreign chap," he said, coming back in a few minutes. "They've acquitted him, and the people are following him down the street. I'm glad he's not to be hanged anyway."

poses, God disposes! Who knows what cheeks would turn as white as marble man; and they brought in a verdict at a single reproving glance from her. of "Not Guilty" without leaving the

by the window, and her eyes followed weeks in jail. If she had not meddled long ago" will be his; we knew that court; "she will be five years old in uncle would have known that he didn't leave the house till after two, and we'd "To school?" asked Moritz, who was have said so at the inquest; and he'd 'I hardly think he would, Mrs. Lynch.

"Anyhow, Dolly's had a lesson that she won't forget in a hurry." said her uncle. "She'll never tell a lie again."

"I know, dear mother, that she must | "You made the clock tell one for you, learn to read and write, but why not my lass, and that was just the same,

"She didn't think of it in that light, The woman, who remained behind, days. May that be your reward."

With a parkin white parkin whit sul was in court, and he's looking after you know well that I'd do ten times as much any day only to give you a I have to work hard for that."

you were," said Dolly; and Mar-A fortnight later Dolly came to her

"Ah," she murmured, "your prosinto the house, followed by his mother "Whom have you chosen, Moritz?" afeared of is that you don't really know "An old flowed little mother; but how to value him." "I'm right glad to hear it, my girl," to the bed with a small cord. tiny bundle in his arms, and bore it fess honestly, I have thought of it." better or a kinder husband. All I'm demanded.

(The End.)

THE USEFUL GIRAFFE. Employed to Get Down Balls That Had Lodged in the Roof Gutter.

"Good natured?" said the old circus count she asked: man. "Why! The best in the world. When the oldman's boy used to get the burglar answered. a baseball lodged in a gutter at the eaves of the house-this was when we how she was going to get loose. The were off the road in winter quarters be up to the house in the morning and -he never used to get out at the scut- he would set her free. She said semetle and climb down the roof and take times he did not come there at all durthe risk of falling off and breaking ing the day. At another time, Dolly would have the barn and get out the giraffe. The glar said. He handed her an old enhis neck to get it. He used to go to to the neighbor's," the obliging burwanted-till they came to the house wrists. She wrote: and then walk along the side looking "Mrs. Derwood: Come immediately, lady; I will carry her up! I must be house. Making their way into the went as usual after the giraife. When "Then I'll put it on the steps and the graffe looked along the gutter that place a stone on it" the hungler and his younger comrades, on the way to Aunt Lott was Frau von Ratenow's close crowded court, Martin, after a the graffe looked along the gutter that place a stone on it," the burglar ansthe house of mourning, that he knew foster-sister and cousin and the owner of a small estate at Z__ that with man, succeeded in conding a massage of the gutter and looked are gutter that place a stone on it, the burgiar anshis nose out of the gutter and looked. They had some further conversation failed to get the ball, and they knew self, I went downstairs and released had formed connections which he could home with the lonely parents; after whole story. This comparatively easy running a big noisy stream as usual, it must be there, but it was soon exmy father. Then I went out and across had formed connections which he could home with the lonely parents; after not sever at once. Hegebach replied their demise she revaired to the castle business, was, however, followed by a the tin water pipe from the roof ran about the burglary story. A queer one instant the lonely parents; after whose she revaired to the castle business, was, however, followed by a the tin water pipe from the roof ran about the burglary story. A queer one Little Hegebach was a charming woA purring rat sat upon the windowsifting her motives for tampering in a thin sheet against the side of the man; it is said," he concluded pathetiledge, on this particular day, and Aunt Lott herself sat by the window cally.

Sitting her motives for tampering in a turn sheet against the side of the concealing the fact until now. The terrolled down the water pipe."

WHY HE FELT LONELY.

What's the matter with you? asks the wife of the peculiar man. I'm feeling lonely, was the reply. Don't you like this city? I don't like this earth.

What's the objection to it? People are too egotistical. If there's A YOUNG QUEEN'S DEVOTION. anything I hate it's egotism. And when I see kings going ahead confidently and affectionate and devoted girl to her trying all sorts of insincere tricks with mother. Up to the present time these complete affrontery, and lawyers seek- traits are the most marked in her ing applause for arguing on the wrong character. One day she said to her ing utter selfishness without a blush, I am forced to the conviction that I am moral gentleman on this globe. And it and you take the second'.'

ther hat and shawl.

"Good-bye Heg-shach," said she, "I must go home; they have just sent for must go home; they have just sent for they did not hear Frau von Ratenow on a footstool—and they darked so earnestly of the dead that must go home; they have just sent for me. Mority has seeme. That the little girl will be well taken care of. I need "A strange how "murmured they do down as she will be well taken care of. I need "A strange how "murmured the window as she spoke. Le turned and looked in aston—be is not like me!"

there's much doubt of it now."

Mrs. Burke was a stout, kind-heart-social scale than her cousin, the pilots of chief they did not hear they did not hear frau von Ratenow on a footstool—and they with they did not hear frau von Ratenow. Mrs. Burke was a stout, kind-heart-social scale than her cousin, the pilots of them being the Sargasso Sea, which literally in the pilots of the dead that was attained and perceiving that she was they do they stone they did not hear frau von Ratenow. Mrs. Burke was a stout, kind-heart-social scale than her cousin, the pilots of the same first place in my daughter's heart. But the Sargasso Sea, which literally in the pilots of the dead that was a shouther. The social scale than her cousin, the pilots of the same first place in my daughter's heart. But the Sargasso Sea, which literally in the pilots of the dead that was a shouther, and insisted on her resting the pilots of the dead that they are they do did woman somewhat higher in the social scale than her cousin, the pilots of the dead that was a shouth literally and the provious of them being the Sargasso Sea, which literally the pieces together with stoky gelations and perceiving that so on them.

The was standified to the dead that the social seale than her cousin, the pilots of the standing the same first place in my daughter's heart. But the social seale than her cousin, the pilots of the same first place in my daughter's heart. But the pilots of the same first place in my daughter's heart and the social seale

A NICE, CHATTY BURGLAR.

ROBBER WHO TIED HER.

the srteet outside, and old Lynch went | She Never Thought to Lock the Door When She Heard Him Downstairs, and She Told Him How Much Money Her Father Had and Where It Was-Amenities in Burglary.

Martin came in soon after, bringing Nichols village, Bridgeport, Conn., Friwith which the authorities of that country have ever had to deal. The was such consideration shown to victims in these parts by men desperate enough to enter a house at midnight to rob and plunder the inmates. The authorities say it is almost too good Investigation shows that the robbers entered through the cellar door, which was unlocked. From the cellar "I didn't tell a lie, uncle," exclaimed they went straight to an old bureau in Mr. Nichol's room, in the bottom drawer of which was the money which they took away. It was in bills of large denominations, and was between the leaves of an old book. Mr. Nichols "No; I don't think she did. What- was bound without difficulty or outery. the room, not like a grief-stricken man, ing to yeu. Hegebach; that you will ters of my own, I should, perhaps—I as other people—she always tells the heard the men downstairs in her father's room, but did not get up and lock the door, nor did she put her head out of the window and call for help. She shades and began to

SEARCH HER POCKETBOOK. answer. "Any one would have done She was lying as if asleep. When she saw him take her money she said: "What are you taking my money for? The burglar looked toward her and said, pleasantly: "I won't take it, then." He put it back. Then he walked over and placing his hand on her throat, choked her, not hard, and said: "Keep quiet or I'll kill you." Then he tied her wrists and made her fast

"Where's your father's money?" he Downstairs in an old book in the lower bureau drawer in his room," she replied. The burglar went downstairs, and returning in a minute with the book, sat down upon her bed and began to take the money from between the leaves. He asked how much there was, and she replied that when she counted it a few days before there was about $500. After he had completed the

"How much is there?" "Five hundred and twenty dollars,"

As he turned to go she asked him old eighteen-footer would trot along velope which he took from the book, after the boy-he knew what was and also a pencil. Her fingers were free, the cord being tied about her is that the burglars were informed so thoroughly as to the conditions. They knew all the members of the family; they knew just who was in the house and the matches they struck, as shown by the burnst ones which have been picked up by the detectives, were the same as those in the house. They knew that the money was in the old bureau. Not a lock barred their entrance to both rooms, and the girl, hearing the men downstairs, made no attempt to secure the door of her room, and summon aid by shouting out of the window. Miss Nichols's note was not left at the neighbor's by the chatty burglar.

mother, the queen regent."

the only consistently high-toned and means that I must take the first place

Frau von Ratenow entered the captain's dreary sitting-room; she wore her hat and shawl.

"Good-hye Hegebach," said she. "I talked so earnestly of the dead that

"Good-hye Hegebach," said she. "I talked so earnestly of the dead that

"Good-hye Hegebach," said she. "I talked so earnestly of the dead that

"Good-hye Hegebach," said she. "I talked so earnestly of the dead that

"Good-hye Hegebach," said she. "I talked so earnestly of the dead that

"Good-hye Hegebach," said she. "I talked so earnestly of the dead that

"Good-hye Hegebach," said she. "I talked so earnestly of the dead that

"Good-hye Hegebach," said she. "I talked so earnestly of the dead that

"Good-hye Hegebach," said she. "I talked so earnestly of the dead that

"Good-hye Hegebach," said she. "I talked so earnestly of the dead that

"There at once, sir. I'll wait and bring you word how the trial ends—not that

"There at once, sir. I'll wait and bring you word how the trial ends—not that

"There at once, sir. I'll wait and bring you word how the trial ends—not that

"There at once, sir. I'll wait and bring you word how the trial ends—not that

"There at once, sir. I'll wait and bring you word how the trial ends—not that

"There at once, sir. I'll wait and bring you word how the trial ends—not that

"There at once, sir. I'll wait and bring you word how the trial ends—not that

"There at once, sir. I'll wait and bring you word how the trial ends—not that

"There at once, sir. I'll wait and bring you word how the trial ends—not that

"There at once, sir. I'll wait and bring you word how the trial ends—not that

"There at once, sir. I'll wait and bring you word how the trial ends—not that

"There at once, sir. I'll wait and bring you word how the trial ends—not that

"There at once, sir. I'll wait and bring you word how the trial ends—not that the trial ends—no FISH THAT CLOTHE THEMSELVES. "that will be only natural and right. Mothers have always, sooner or later, and three or four of authority were for aggressive course strikers in the sun measuring to the superintendent of the a policy of peace. "Let me tell you they sat around th lamp in the office of night, waiting for a that might turn up. there is no telling w on the card will be the pleasantest tu story," he said, "but point I wish to make give you young fell to think about. I a and when I was 21 ed in a course of ci had been sent to Me of a silver mine or and uncle. I had to cans and an English as assistants, and w handle whatever n though we understo ing into a bad cou ilization. I remem pleased me, for I they say nowadays tackle the Mexican how we would eng an ignorant popula effect. "We got to the

we soon had a for but we did not mal trouble was that from transportatio get our stuff to n out of the mine. most constant fig of brigands that i These gave us so destroyed so much I at last organize twenty-five miner with muskets, and man drilled them very creditable lo was proud of them gands a bit more was solemnly swor on sight, and they them on several had so reported t The leader of th ed Jose Calixto, o called him, and he Bitter Creek and on the neck of ev munity except the foreigners. Us in but I was fresh and I sent word that if I ever car his tricks I would martial and shoot taking the law in it was no worse t States, so I dida "About two we wetn forth and v around the mines,

petering out, he down our stable t structures, but no and we gave him mountains and car man did the wor near shooting on he got the Great We carried him the next day we called together, eigners, exclusive sentence of death Jose Culixto by vocate and chief grumblings amon the decision, but his shooting at went ahead, and ing we marched of ten out to the Jose in the mid priest had been w two of my soldier There were no ci camp, so we were "I confess tha stood before me behind him and and not twenty my shooting squ their guns ready mand to fire, I w tired from my p be meted out by when the prison blindfold remove it from his eyes and smiled moo whether I wou deal more over the devil of a Great example of. How ly the time for I nerved myself perate diseases r medies and other a tonic. "Well the tim word to my men heart, I gave the ten guns explod eously, for my Fo trained, the body into the air an ground writhing greeable fashion to look at it, and over to the serg leaving the fun the priest, I we we had improvi ing very decide to be home. "They had a dead brigand ,a beating of tom brious music to earth in any for marched up the the pass to me