For Sale by McFarlane & Co.
Gladstone.
 The following lines were written by Rev. T. Watson, of Colborne formerly of Fleherion Baptist Church, and appeared in last week's Advance:
 We praise the Lord of earth and heaven, Who promised mercies never fail, For all the graces and wisdom given To one just passed within the veil, Gladstone receives his heart's request, And now enjoys his well earned rest.
 From early life to manhood's prime The upward path he bravely trod: His later life was made sublime Through deeds inspired by faith in God. In thought and act, by voice and pen He lived to help his fellowmen.
 So large of heart, so clear in mind And so unselfish in his aim, So tender, thoughtful, true and kind, How widely known is Gladstone's name! From worker's bench to monarch's throne All hearts delight his worth to own.
 The foremost statesman of his age, Beloved by men of every land, His name upon the deathless page Shall evermore un tarnished stand. His task completed in his day, "The grand old man" has won his crown.

 "A Swindle," is the name that appears over the office door of a struggling lawyer in the city of Vancouver, B. C. A friend suggested that he write the first name in full, thinking it would look better and sound better, but when the distressed lawyer tearfully whispered that his first name was "Adam", the suggestion wasn't pressed.

SOME of our exchanges last week had an original (?) article on "The Rights of Bicyclists", and had it not been that the same original article, with the same introduction, appeared two weeks ago in this paper we would copy it for the benefit and information of our readers, giving credit to the authors who seem to have been simultaneously inspired.

A WOMAN fell off the G. T. R. train while it was running at a high rate of speed near Goldstone on Wednesday night. When the train reached Goldstone a section man and a doctor were sent back with a lorry to pick her up. She was found slightly injured but still able to reach a farm house. She was driven to Goldstone but declined to give her name.

A diabolical act was perpetrated in the Campbell House sheds on Saturday night by some dastard who scattered grain mixed with large quantities of Paris green over the shed floor. It is suspected that the object was to kill pigeons, but whatever the object was, it is to be hoped that the guilty party will be found out and punished severely.—Chatsworth News.

ON Wednesday of last week, Jas. and Andrew Williams, sons of Mr. Benjamin Williams, of the G. T. R. here, met with what might have been a very serious accident. While the family were out, the young cousins took it into their heads to go fishing and began hunting around for a supply of tackle. In the search they came across a can of gunpowder hidden away on top of a cupboard. Taking this outside, they put it under a pile with a quantity of oily tow, set fire to the mixture and waited to see it fizz. It fizzed, but unfortunately for the boys they were too near the base of operations when the explosion occurred. The younger lad got his hair burned and face scorched, while the older brother, the chief manipulator in the grand pyrotechnic display got a scorching about the face and hands. Both boys escaped well, and while nursing their wounds they'll have time to congratulate themselves on the good fortune of their narrow escape. The lesson should be a warning to other boys but it's hardly likely it will. They'll soon be able to go fishing again.

"Say friend, you'll either have to keep me over night or sell me a lantern." These were the words used a few years ago in addressing a prosperous farmer in Southern Ephraim, by a traveller who had yet twenty miles to drive one of those awfully dark nights we sometimes experience. "Well stranger, I ain't going to do neither; you may bag on that; perhaps you'll be able to hang out just ahead there where you see the light in the window," and the traveller drove on to try his luck once more. Reaching the house by the roadside, he hailed the proprietor, a humble farmer, in the same words used only a few minutes before in addressing the great agrarian lord. But the reception was different, a new climate was entered, a transition from inhospitable barbarism to an atmosphere of humanity had been made in a few short moments, and the benighted stranger felt that once more he stood in civilization. The impromptu response was, "You can have just which you like. You're a stranger to me. I'll sell or lend you a lantern if you say so, but you surely wouldn't think of going further this awful night. Better let me put your horse away, you can put up with 'pot luck' for one night, and there's a spare bunk you can tumble into till morning all right. The impudence of the generous little farmer was exactly suitable to the tired feelings of the weary traveller and the proffered hospitality was cheerfully accepted. A heavy rain came on and not till the next afternoon was he able to get away. But to this day 'Jim Irwin,' the cattle dealer, has not forgotten the free, generous, hospitality of John M. Davis, the recent Patron candidate for Centre Grey. He hasn't forgotten the other fellow either, but remembers him only as an example for comparison when wide contrasts are needed.

Mr. Wm. Edge, of Edge Hill, had the misfortune a few days ago to lose three head of cattle under very peculiar circumstances. They had been out feeding in the bush, where they took sick and two of them died almost instantly. Though some suspect they were poisoned, Mr. Edge is inclined to take a more charitable view of the case, and attribute their death to the eating of poisonous weeds of some kind.

Thin Blood
 Where the blood loses its intense red—grows thin and watery, as in anemia, there is a constant feeling of exhaustion, a lack of energy—vitality and the spirits depressed.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda is peculiarly adapted to correct this condition. The cod-liver oil, emulsified to an exquisite fineness, enters the blood direct and feeds its every corpuscle, restoring the natural color and giving vitality to the whole system. The hypophosphites reach the brain and nerve centres and add their strengthening and beneficial effect. If the roses have left your cheeks, if you are growing thin and exhausted from overwork, or if age is beginning to tell, use SCOTT'S Emulsion.

Be sure you get SCOTT'S Emulsion. All druggists; 50c. and $1.00.
