THE 12th IN DURHAM.

Not since 1892 has there been an Orange celebration in Durham, until Tuesday last the town was again invaded and the loyal strains of life and drum, Band music galore, hundreds of Orangemen and Orange Young Britons and thousands of spectators, demonstrated the life, energy and push of an organization, whose traducers would long since wish to see relegated to the shades of oblivion, and not among the opponents of the Protestant faith alone are such to be found. But no! Orangeism still lives and on the 12th of July can show sufficient activity to prove conclusively that the death rattle of the society is not yet in hearing distance. Men of every nationality, every rank and station in life, and every division of Protestantism are found amongst its members. The Institution, today, though almost wholly divested of prejudice and bigotry stands firmly on the solid rock of Eternal Truth and banded together to uphold the principles of Protestantism.

The day broke beautifully, clear, bright, cool and inviting—a fitting prelude to the day on which true Orangemen feel it a duty to demonstrate religiously his sincere devotion to the principles of Protestantism, and show his colors in the onward march of freedom.

Up to nine o'clock everything was quiet, then the sound of the distant drum announced the approach of some of the outlying lodges, and the "Home Lodge" marshalled their forces to give them a loyal welcome to the freedom of the town.

A number of lodges having arrived all paraded to the station to meet a special train of seven coaches, packed with brethren from Mt. Forest, Holstein and many other points south, when all again, reinforced by the southern contingent, marched through some of the principal streets, and to the four hotels, where the cravings of the inner man were fully satisfied.

Owing to an unexpected part of the program, caused by the burning of Mr. Charter Smith's Foundry, the afternoon arrangements were somewhat delayed, and it was not till after 2 p. m. that the forces were formed up for the afternoon parade through the streets, and to the speaking platform on the "Crescent."

About 2:30 the chair was taken by County Master, Mr. Thos. McFadden who after a few preliminary remarks called upon Mayor Calder, who surpassed himself in his eloquent address of welcome, expressive of his high esteem for orangemen, and hopes for their future prosperity and early return to Durham.

Rev. Mr. Ferguson was the next speaker and for about half an hour the vast audience was held spell bound by the loyal utterances of the Rev. gentleman, who though not an orangeman himself, thought he was fully saturated with the principles of Orangeism, in being a true protestant. Reference was made to the greatness of England, the universal character of the English Language, as the general language of commerce, the civilizing and christianizing influence exerted by the British nation, and the fidelity of all when brought under the power of British influence. The independence and annexation cries of a few years ago are now lost in a greater desire for a unity of the Empire. The address was the roughly patriotic, logical, interesting and enthusiastic.

Rev. Mr. Ryan was the next speaker and though he did not say so, his remarks would lead one to conclude that he was one of the brethren. He is a firm believer in the principles of Orangeism, its creed being in accordance with the settlement of the Reformation, and its politics a devoted loyalty to the Empire. He saw no reason why the parades and flags should be at all offensive to Romanists. The flag had on it a portrait of the Queen and a portrait of Wm III. There should be nothing offensive in that, he thought. Nor to him did these seem any reason why the party tunes should give offence.

Rev Mr. Burns of Corinth gave a pithy, brief, extemporaneous speech into which he crowded, in a few words, a vast amount of wit, humor, pathos and loyalty.

The 31st Batt. Band was in attendance during the day and rendered valuable service.

EDGE HILL.

In the afternoon of Wednesday of last week Edge Hill held its usual annual gala day and picnic. The weather was all that could be desired and the woods which had borne many evidences of the ravages of the tent caterpillars a week or two ago, had again come out in leaf and so afforded shade to the many hundred picnickers who came to Edge Hill to have a day's fun as has been their custom for many years. Like good wine this famed picnic improves with age, nor are their any evidences that it is on the way to decay. The attendance may not have been as large as that of last year, but for that there are a few causes for which the picnic was not in anyway responsible, notably in the vicinity of Top Cliffe and Balsam Valley whose jolly crowds of men and maidens were much missed. The raising of McCuaig's huge barn kept them away and Mr. McCuaig and his men now wish they had taken in the picnic, for they would be just as far ahead. The music for the platform was given by the McDonald Bros. and heavy indeed must be the heel that that music would not have made lighter. It might be said of it that, "It made some dance who never danced before, and those who always danced to dance the more." The strains of the bag pipes stirred those who can proudly boast of having Highland blood in their veins. Many grey heads drew near and as they listened to those familiar airs. They thought of their boyhood and girlhood days among the buns and gleans of Scotland. The dancing of Eugene McKechnie plainly showed that neither the weight of years nor of long boots can hold a highlander down when the pipes are playing. The program platform was also a success. On account of lack of time not more than half the program was rendered. The chair was occupied by Mr. John Moffat who knows just what order to take to make everything go off nicely. Among the speakers may be mentioned the names of Messrs. C. Ramage of the Review, W. Irwin of the CHRONICLE, Chris. Williams, James Staples, Jos. Firth, jr., and Pythagoras Thibadeau. Among the singers Mr. Sam. Orchard, Mr. and Mrs. Falkingham, Dan. Dunsmore, Sandy Clark and others. The tent did a booming trade and J. Firth, C. H. Moffat and Guy Williams did their work well. Joe. Firth, jr., had a fatherly oversight over them for a little while, but only for a little while as he soon saw the right boys were in the right place. The children enjoyed themselves immensely and had games and sports of their own. For eatables there was plenty and to spare of the very best that town and country can produce. The ladies deserve special praise for the manner in which they prepared for so huge a picnic as this, and the orderly way in which everything was done. The tea was good, so very good that Messrs. Thos Greenwood and Robt. Edge have made a name for themselves as tea-makers. The tables were neatly arranged and surrounded by a handsome piece of wire fencing put up by Hugh Firth, who is an expert at the business. Mr. Dan. McDonald kindly gave an exhibition of his skill and strength in putting the stone. Besides being a good musician Dan. holds more than one medal and championship belt for putting the stone and tossing the caber. The games and sports and dancing kept going briskly until the shades of evening drew on and then the crowds began facing for home, having spent another happy day in their lives by being at Edge Hill picnic.
