DURING THE GOLD FEVER.
Scenes and Incidents in Melbourne When Gold was Easily Found.
Gold threatened to become as common as silver in the days of Solomon. In one year £12,650,000, in eight years £95,000,000, were won. Some men at Golden Point made as much as £400 each day. Another exceptionally lucky party unearthed thirty-four pounds of gold in one day. No wonder that such "pockets" were termed "jewellers' shops!" Occasionally a nugget worth £10,000 was unearthed. The result of this sudden influx of wealth almost without labor, and with risks which are infinitesimal as compared to Klondike, was the temporary demoralization of the population. Melbourne, in the height of the gold fever, has been described by one who knew it well as "a fevered, drunken, delirious pandemonium." The lucky ones—and there are thousands of them—squandered their riches in the most reckless fashion. Some of their fantastic tricks would scarcely be credited were they not attested by witnesses still living. The game of ninepins, we are told, was played with bottles of champagne, for which he who broke least had to pay; dozens of the same costly wine were emptied into tubs and drunk from tin pannikins, spirits and beer being added to give "body" to the beverage; one man, in imitation of Caligula, shod his horse with gold; sandwiches made of banknotes were devoured; silver wrapped up in banknotes was thrown to popular actresses instead of flowers—in fact, money was so plentiful that the reckless diggers could not "knock it down" fast enough. They thought they only had to dig a few feet in the earth to get plenty more, and for a time it almost seemed as if this were time it almost seemed as if the characteristics of Victoria's hot youth.

A SINGULAR CUSTOM.
A singular custom prevails among the Tartars or Kurds. If a man gets into difficulties—i.e., loses his cattle or other movable property—he pours a little brown sugar into a piece of colored cloth, ties it up and carries one such parcel to each of his friends and acquaintances. In return he is presented, according to circumstances, with a cow, or sheep, or a sum of money. He is thus at once set on his legs again. The same method is adopted when a young man wishes to marry, but is not in a position to satisfy the parents of his intended bride in the matter of the "bushy"—i.e., marriage dowry. Only in this case he does not go around himself, but sends a friend or a servant.

WHERE MEASLES IS FEARED.
Frightful Mortality Caused by the Disease in South Pacific Islands.
With the communities of the temperate zone measles is accepted and tolerated as one of the many indignities connected with childhood. If a grown man has the fever and the rash he becomes the source of mirth in others, and is laughed at by his comrades because he has not yet concluded his infancy. Out in the Pacific measles is no laughing matter, but is regarded as health officials look upon cholera and the plague, both because of its high degree of contagiousness and the large percentage of mortality among its victims. The two competing lines of steamships between America and the Australian continent grumble loudly at being forced to manage their traffic in accordance with a theory which places measles in the same order of quarantinable offences as smallpox. More than once it has happened that the steamers have been quarantined at Honolulu or Suva or Apia, all because some baby has had this disorder.
In 1874, after the British Government had annexed the Fiji Islands, a war vessel was detailed to take King Cakoban and a batch of high chiefs on an educational cruise which should show them the magnitude of the British empire as displayed at Sydney. Unfortunately the party on its return to Fiji brought the contagion of measles. The pest spread with terrifying rapidity from island to island, and attacked all ages. There was only one medical man in the group, and he could not begin to take care of the dangerous cases in Levuka, and as for the hundreds of other islands away from Ovalau the only thing that could be done was to send out word to the sufferers not to lie in the water. But despite these orders there was the one thing each Fijian felt that he must do when he had measles, and as soon as the rash began to smart and grow hot the patients hurried to the nearest stream or even to the beach and jumped into the water. Result, what might have been expected; total mortality during the epidemic, 50,000; being nearly one in every three of population. Remembering the introduction of measles it costs £50 for the first offence against Fijian quarantine laws.
Measles found its way into Tonga, despite all efforts to safeguard the kingdom. The death rate was just about the same as in Fiji. From Tonga the contagion spread to Samoa. Its coming had been foreseen and the proper steps taken. The native pastors were supplied with medicines and instructed in their use. Best of all, every town was placarded with notices telling the people what they must not do. It is Samoan nature to look upon a "nusi-pepe," a public notice, as we regard a "Keep off the grass" sign; he will be scrupulously obedient to any printed paper headed in large letters "silasila mai," "take notice," tacked upon a tree. Here the sum of the deaths was only 2,000, or 1 in 15.
At such cost as this the lesson has been learned well in the tropical Pacific.

The Merchant—Here, my good fellow, is a dollar. It will buy you the necessities of life.
The Medicant—G'wan! A chainless wheel costs one hundred dollars.

A clever remark made at a London dinner not long ago is thus reported. The subject of conversation was Mr. George Alexander, the well-known actor, and some one remarked that his real name was Sampson. What a pity, said a lady that he doesn't keep it! It's such a good name for a player. Sampson was the first actor who brought down the house!
