THE BRITISH ARMY BANDS

THE MILITARY SERVICE.

All Bandmasters Must Be Thoroughly Schooled-Bandsmen Are Under the Command of the Regimental Officers.

Music has always played an important part in the arts of war as in the arts of peace. It is indeed, probable that while lutes, and stringed instruments were originally used in the ser- quartermaster and an adjutant, a vice of religion, instruments of brass director of music, chaplains of the were used only in martial music. The trumpets of the Roman infantry, and the bent clarions of their cavalry are frequently mentioned, but no record has been discovered leading to the belief that these instruments were used for any other purposes.

CROWN HIS CAREER.

The musical training at Kneller Hall is one of the most thorough kind. The staff consists of a commandant, a Church of England and the Roman Catholic church, two schoolmasters and ten professors, besides numerous minor officers. The students are instructed in all instruments used military bands, harmony, counterpoint orchestration, conducting, and, short, everything necessary for a fully equipped bandmaster to know. From two to three years is the ordinary course, and at the end of his term the student is thoroughly examined, and if found efficient earns a diploma and usually remains at Kneller Hall as a teacher until there is a vacancy for a bandmaster.

When he reaches this position his work is, as has been said by no means a great deal more money than the average commissioned officer. The members of the band rise at 6 o'clock, is at 8 o'clock; from 9 o'clock to 10 o'clock there is individual practice, the week the band is expected to play at the officers' mess. When the island was ceded to France, the bones were taken to Havana and solemnly buried in the Columbus had solemnly buried in the Cathedral in January, 1796. What remained of the body was placed in an urn in a niche in the left wall of the chancel, and covered with a marble slab. Recently the inhabitants of San Domingo have claimed that the bones of the discoverer of the New World still rest in their soil. It appears that when the bones were removed to Cuba the priest of San Domingo kept back half and hid them in the south of the sacristy of their Cathedral. Here they were discovered in 1877. If the Spanish Government again claims the ashes of Columbus, the restless spirit of the explorer will have to return to Spain, for every inch of the territory which he presented to his adopted country will have passed from her rule.
