NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The History and Conquest of the Philippines and other Island Possessions.

BY ALDEN MARCH, A. M. The most recent, and apparently one of the most complete and authentic publications grown out of our wars of 1898-99, bears the above title. The work is quite comprehensive, embracing the entire Spanish-American War, in 1898, the Philippine War in 1899, together with a description of the East and West Indies, the Hawaiian and Ladrones Islands, and the people of these tropical countries, which have become, at least for a time, subject to the United States.

The author, Mr. Alden March, of the editorial staff of the Philadelphia Press, is the brother of the famous Astor Battery in its action in the Philippine Islands. Captain March participated in the fierce fighting around Manila, and the famous revolver charge in which block-house No. 13 was taken by him, though three-fourths of his men were shot down in the assault.

Mr. March's position on the editorial staff with Charles Emory Smith, President McKinley's Cabinet, has given him unusual facilities for consulting all official reports and data in possession of the government at Washington, and the thoroughness with which he availed himself of these advantages is shown by the completeness of detail which other writers have not been so fortunate as to obtain.

The author very appropriately begins the volume with a general chapter on the Philippines. The narrative of Magellan's discovery of those islands (which were discovered by Columbus, in the first circumnavigation of the globe), is more thrilling than that of the discovery of America by Columbus; and, under the vigorous pen of the author, this record of nearly four hundred years passes like a vivid panorama before the reader, reviewing half a century of naval warfare between the Dutch and Spaniards; repeated insurrections of the natives, crushed out by cruelties on the part of Spain as great as she ever visited upon Cuba; Chinese piratical invasions; the conquest of the islands by England, etc.

The reader is made to wonder how all this historic comedy and tragedy could have happened in the world, and this enlightened age know so little about it.

This magnificent naval battle of May 1st, in which Dewey destroyed Spain's power and changed the destiny of the nation, is painted with admirable skill and accuracy, as is also the second battle of Manila, when 5,000 American soldiers swept into a heavily entrenched city, garrisoned by nearly twice that number of Spaniards, and the surrender of the parts played by General Wesley Merritt, Frank Green, Mark Smith, Anderson and others, are given with out seeming impartiality or favoritism.

Succeeding Spain's surrender the work brings us face to face with Aguinaldo, the insurgent leader. The cunning of this remarkable chieftain, his rapid rise to prominence, and the frightful sacrifice of life which resulted from his several months of fruitless but desperate warfare with American troops, all are presented with the skill of a faithful historian.

Following the war in the Philippines comes a history and description of the island of Cuba, Porto Rico, and the Ladrones, and in connection with the history of these islands is given the history of the Spanish-American War, geographically arranged, and succeeding in its logical order the earlier history of the various islands.

One of the most interesting parts of the work consists of a description of the peoples of the various islands, with their manners and customs. In the Philippines, for instance, the author declares there are over eighty different tribes, many of whom have never seen a white man, some of the tribes still practicing cannibalism in all its horrors.

Amusements, such as cock fighting, horse racing, and other pastimes, are fully described, as are also their educational, religious and social conditions and institutions.

Manila, the metropolis of the Philippine islands; Havana, of Cuba; San Juan, of Porto Rico; Honolulu, of the Hawaiian island, together with smaller cities, all come in, with their interesting inhabitants, characteristics and peculiarities.

The author does not neglect the commercial aspect of the situation. He tells us of the great value of the Philippines to other island trade, and their importance to our national trade, as well as from a military standpoint; their immense wealth and resources, the value of their export and import trade, and the importance of looking to the future, he speculates intelligently on how they develop under the care of our non-extended, with a view to the side of the subject, thus giving impartially the main arguments on the one side of this important question, which will undoubtedly be a vital issue of the next national campaign.

The interest of the work is still further enhanced by a chapter devoted to the heroes of all those in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines, who won fame for themselves and added new glory to American arms by their chivalry and daring both on the land and in the fever-smited camps of the tropics, where American soldiers had never before done battle under the stars and stripes.

The work contains over one hundred excellent half-tone illustrations, printed on enameled paper, which give the text a special interest. There are also two lithograph maps in colors. Size, large octavo, 500 pages, bound in cloth. Price $1.50.

This work is being sold in this community by Mr. W. G. MacFarlane.

THE WESTERN FAIR.

London, September 7th to 16th, 1899.

The directors of this ever progressive institution find themselves facing their annual difficulty, that of providing sufficient accommodation for exhibitors and visitors at the great Live Stock and Agricultural Show of Western Canada, but now as in the past they are equal to the occasion, having plenty of money and hard earned experience. An extensive addition is in course of construction to the Machinery Hall, nearly doubling its capacity. The Agricultural, Horticultural and Dairy Buildings have been moved and reset, so as to form one immense exhibition hall, and one hundred and fifty feet of an addition has been built there to. Also a new permanent public office building over one hundred and fifty feet long is being erected at the King Street Entrance, for Express, Telephone, Telegraph, Barber Shop, Parcel Room and Press Offices, and to crown all two large open stands, 340 feet by 40 feet—up to date in every particular for the comfort of the public—with additional refreshment booths and dining halls underneath. The Queen's Park, Fair Grounds, have been greatly beautified by the above alterations and additions.

The prizes offered have been increased by a little over $1,500.00, one thousand of the amount going to the Live Stock Classes.

The Prize List book, itself is greatly improved, being more information, put up in better form than any other we have yet seen. The entry forms are most complete and labor saving, a separate form being provided for each department, the exhibitors having only to make a mark or cross opposite all the section they may wish to enter in, all details and information being fully set forth on each, and deriving even the most procrastinating, as any entry paper can be filled out in less than two minutes.

The special attractions are being arranged for, and it is safe to say that only the very best will be engaged, and plenty of them.

A new Secretary, Mr. Jno. A. Nelles, has been appointed to fill the position vacated by Mr. Brown, after ten years of service, and as the adage goes, "new brooms sweep clean," great things may be looked forward to. We wish the incoming officer every success.

That Glenrodden Picnic.

TO THE EDITOR, CHRONICLE: Dear Sir,—I notice an item in the Glenrodden correspondence of the Durham Review of June 22nd re Glenrodden Picnic. Now Mr. Editor, I was at that picnic and enjoyed the half day's sport to my heart's content, and everyone there seemed to be in good cheer. Everything advertised was produced except the band and that was unavoidably absent on account of one of the cornet players not being able to attend on account of illness. There was lots to eat and to spare, good music, dancing, swinging, racing and a friendly chat with your neighbors. What more did the writer expect for ten cents? Possibly he has not been long over from Cuba, or possibly his knowledge of picnics is meagre, or he may be one who was dropped from the management, or he may be too high strung to dance on a country platform, or he may be a little insane which is the general opinion of those who have seen the item. Thanking you for the valuable space, I am Yours very truly, FAIR PLAY.

Are You Married? Are you married to the old time belief that consumption is incurable? If so you are wedded to a mistaken notion. though dimly, at night, so that of alarm or necessity, the owner may be able to see his way out of a place without having to get a light. We may be sure that the presence of the animals are turned out at all the sleep they need; and even on moonless and starless nights is as much light, if not more, than there would be in a stable lit by gas or lamps were turned on. Besides, the fact that horses which kick or are otherwise restless in a dark stable at all remain quiet if the place is lit up as much as a day, shows that they do not like darkness, which is an unnatural condition.

Provisions against fire are even necessary in stables than in houses. In some luxurious stables each box is furnished with a burner.

GOOD STOCK. It is that so many of those who undertake to establish themselves in the thoroughbred poultry business are certainly laboring under a mistake. It is out of the question to breed fine stock from ordinary stock. Indeed it is a waste of time to undertake it. In starting a business to be careful as to the stock he is laying, as upon this depends the success or failure of the business. Years and then have the same results. Of course he may try to a certain extent, but it is low business. Good stock is purchased from some breeder, which is the first step towards success. Then by taking one good poultry paper, so as to get the proper ways of mating, and caring for them, he may end up by having a flock of birds proud of.

THE BENEFIT OTHER CROPS. It has been demonstrated that the use of manure on the roots of field crops, such as oats planted in rows, would be benefited by this use of nitrogen unless the manure is thick as to interfere with the development of the other crops.

COLOR FOR HORSES. A quiet color, such as bay, chestnut is the best and most common in the market. Occasionally a dark chestnut with four white legs will sell well enough in the trade, but ordinarily colored horses outrank the bay and chestnut.

THE CREAM. After separating the cream should be aired and cooled to 40 degrees. It should be kept at this temperature until churning, which is indicated by the creaming slightly acid. The temperature for churning is 58 degrees.

LET HIM SWING. A child cried from the window, and I got right out of that. The first thing you know I was down! exclaimed the boy.

When Mr. Smithskins on you an' you got tired on the porch an' Willie, she interrupted, 'be it's all right after all.

COURAGING HER. At breakfast, I want to tell you to-day, dear, if the weather is favourable. What are the chances consulting his paper. Rain and lightning.

Ever since I can remember I have been afraid of the dark. I was so afraid if I drew a candle to stop to rest and regain my strength would be so overcome with fear that I had to sit down to regain my strength. I was so overcome with fear that I had to sit down to regain my strength. I was so overcome with fear that I had to sit down to regain my strength.

is, and as a result am very nervous. The blessing of sleep is oppressive sensation has been with the greatest of ease. I feel as if I were free from my limbs. I can be a world of good.
